Car parks anger as public to vote on new fees

By Marijke Cox
 marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

SHEPWAY'S Labour party has written an open letter to district council leader Robert Bliss urging him to ditch a £75,000 consultation over controversial parking fee plans.

The party stressed it had a petition with more than 1,500 signatures against the proposals for parking charges and that instead of a consultation the council should respond to the result of the forthcoming referendum on December 8.

In an open letter to Conservative Cllr Bliss, former Labour mayor of Folkestone John Stockham said: "Why are the council determined to waste £75,000 on a consultation with the public when we already have a petition with over 1,500 signatures against the proposal?"

"When the council receive their results from the consultation, and the results from the referendum, they'll see they've wasted £75,000 of our money that could have been spent on more important issues."

The referendum is being held from 4-9pm on December 8 at local polling stations.

Cllr Bliss said the option of continuing free parking had not been ruled out. The proposals include pay and display charges in key areas, linear charges and new parking limits. If plans go ahead, the scheme will be launched in phases, the first in Folkestone from April 2012.

Vote for festival to ensure Cox and Hound come to the beach

RADIO 1 DJ Sara Cox and Celebrity Juice funnyman Rufus Hound could be coming to Folkestone on Friday for a spot of sand sculpting.

The duo are spending five days driving from Scotland to the south coast to explore the work of projects that have benefited from National Lottery funding.

The trip aims to celebrate the massive £30m raised each week for good causes by players buying lottery tickets.

Lottery-funded scheme the Folkestone Triennial, an art festival which ran for three months over the summer, is going head to head with community food project Harvest Brighton and Hove.

They are two of 10 projects shortlisted from more than 365,000 to have received funding since 1994.

Whichever project wins the most public votes will see Sara Cox and Rufus Hound pay a visit this Friday, November 18, as part of the National Lottery's Facebook campaign Cox and Hound Hit the Road.

If the pair come to Folkestone, they will be pitting their creativity and sand castle building skills against one another in a sand sculpture competition on the beach.

Road tripper Sara Cox said: "I think the roadtrip is a great chance to show everyone who plays or has played the National Lottery a glimpse of what their money actually means to communities."

KOS CAMPAIGN

Join our campaign to help Kent's vulnerable elderly survive winter

By Marijke Cox
marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THOUSANDS of vulnerable and elderly people could be helped this winter through the generosity of others donating their winter fuel payment to the most needy.

To encourage people to help the poorest in their communities, Archant KOS Media has teamed up with Kent Community Foundation (KCF), which has launched the new Surviving Winter fund campaign, to get the crucial message across and cut fuel poverty.

This year, the Government will again give a winter fuel payment – tax-free – of £200 to people over 60 to use as they wish.

But KCF's Annette Fettes said there were a significant number of people who did not need the money.

"In other areas where campaigns were run, less needy people were more than happy to donate their £200 to a Surviving Winter fund," she said. "In Somerset alone, the Community Foundation raised over £50,000 from such donations, which was redistributed to the most vulnerable elderly."

More than 76,500 households are in fuel poverty in Kent and Medway – an estimated 39,000 of them pensioners – and with rising fuel bills and the prospect of another cold winter, older and disadvantaged people remain at risk.

Chief executive of KCF, Carol Lynch, said: "It is not difficult to see the scale of the challenge.

"Each year there are more than 1,000 'excess' winter deaths in Kent and Medway, with many due to causes attributable to the cold."

This newspaper and KCF are now appealing to readers to donate some or all of their payment to the poorest and most vulnerable.

The campaign is being rolled out nationwide by the country's Community Foundations, 56 charities aiming to improve the lives of people through work with local philanthropists and companies.

Over-50s services provider Saga, which has offices in Thanet and Folkestone, is also helping with the campaign.

Director general Ros Altman said: "It is important to enable people who want to help those who are at risk of fuel poverty to keep warm this winter."

A number of high-profile people are involved, including Sir Terry Wogan, Sir David Jason and Sir Michael Parkinson.

Only Fools and Horses actor Sir David said: "When the idea of those most fortunate handing on their winter fuel payments to local, vulnerable people was presented I wanted to pledge my payment."

Former Maidstone MP and Strictly Come Dancing star Ann Widdecombe said she would be donating her payment.

"This gesture is such an easy way to support local people in real need and I hope others will follow suit," she said.

You can donate by cheque. Please remember to Gift Aid your donation, this will add 25 per cent to the its value, using the form below.

You can also donate at www.kentcf.org.uk/surviving_winter.html.

Olympic torch gives Kent chance to shine in run up to 2012 Games

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

AS THE nation counts down the final months to the Olympics next year, Kent's communities will be busy welcoming the iconic torch as it nears the end of its epic journey to the capital.

The county will play a major part in the build-up to the Games, with the flame travelling through 37 Kent towns and villages, stopping overnight in Dover and Maidstone, just a week before the start of the Games.

The flame will also be taken on a paralympic cycle around the circuit at Brands Hatch, near West Kingsdown.

Communities are being encouraged to welcome the torchbearers and flame as it passes through as part of the epic 8,000 mile, 70-day relay across the UK.

Leader of Dover District Council, Cllr Paul Watkins, said he was thrilled the Dover district was chosen to play host.

FLAME: The Olympic torch will visit villages and towns across the county before the 2012 Games

"This is a special occasion for the whole area, and follows the major announcement made in May that the Olympic torch is coming to Dover for the evening celebration," he said.

"We have a unique opportunity to shine a light on the area and showcase the Dover district."

Dover is one of 1,000 communities in the UK chosen by the London 2012 Organising Committee (LOCOG) to welcome the torch, which will spend more time in Kent than any other county.

In Thanet, the flame will pass through 10 areas and stop at Turner Contemporary in Margate.

People from the district are invited to greet the flame and share the excitement of the Olympics. Thanet council leader Cllr Bob Bayford, said: "This is a once in a lifetime opportunity for all of Thanet to join together to welcome the Olympic flame and witness the spectacle of the torch relay."

Chair of LOCOG, Lord Sebastian Coe, said this was Kent's moment to shine. "I want to encourage people to start planning how they can be part of this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and show their support for the inspirational people chosen to carry the flame."

The torch will be carried by 8,000 torchbearers for one mile each.

➔ Man swings cat by tail

THE RSPCA is hunting for a man who swung a cat around in the air by its tail outside a pub in Ramsgate. The incident happened outside the Camden Arms pub in Ramsgate on Saturday, October 29, at 8.30pm. RSPCA Inspector Caroline Doe said: "This was a very violent, nasty attack on a cat. Anyone who witnessed this outside the pub must have been as shocked and appalled as we were." The terrified cat, two-year-old Mowgli, ran away following the incident.

➔ Booze moves cheered

MEDWAY Council's community safety chief Cllr Mike O'Brien has welcomed news that from April, 2012, retailers and bars will be banned from selling alcohol below cost price. Cllr Mike He said: "The Government's ban on below-cost alcohol is a significant first step in tackling alcohol fuelled anti-social behaviour and criminal damage in our community." The moves mean a litre bottle of vodka will not sell for less than £10.71 and a can of lager for less than 38p.

Panto star Dave Lee steps down from Cinderella due to ill health

FUNNYMAN Dave Lee has been forced to pull out of this year's pantomime at the new Marlowe Theatre in Canterbury due to ill health.

Mr Lee, an annual fixture at the Marlowe's festive extravaganza, told theatre chiefs he would be unable to perform in this year's production of Cinderella, last week. He had been due to appear in more than 90 shows.

The star, who lives in Canterbury, is traditionally the first big name to be confirmed for the Christmas show - which this year was to get added spice by virtue of being the first to be staged inside the all-new £25m Marlowe Theatre which opened in October.

A statement from the theatre said: "It is with great regret that due to ill health, Dave Lee will not be appearing in this year's panto."

Mr Lee has raised over £2m with his Dave Lee's Happy Holidays charity, set up 15 years ago with his now late wife Linda.

The charity takes sick and underprivileged children on holiday.

Friends say the star is "very poorly".

Theatre director Mark Everett added: "It is a testament of Dave's professionalism that he wanted to fulfil his commitments to The Marlowe and his many fans by taking part in Cinderella, but 90 shows would be too much at this time."

Mr Lee was one of the most popular attractions in the annual festive show, with his 'bench gag' regularly bringing the house down.

Theatre chiefs say they intend the bench to still appear in this year's show, with Stephen Mulhern likely to lead the crowd through the sing-a-long.

Meanwhile, a replacement to play Mr Lee's character, Baron Hardup, has already been recruited.

REMEMBRANCE DAY

Falklands hero reminds us modern day soldiers still need public's help

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

MANY people strongly associate Remembrance Day with the two world wars of the last century, but the British Army has been involved in many conflicts down the years in which servicemen and women have risked their lives.

One man in this group is Major Stephen Hambrook, from Canterbury. The 78-year-old lost his left leg below the knee when clearing mines in the Falklands.

Major Hambrook said: "It was January, 1983. I went down in the October after the main conflict had finished. As you can imagine, there was plenty to do. The weather was terrible to deal with. At one moment it would be a sunny day and the next it would be snowing."

"We all had to live in tents but we got a lot done and I made a lot of friends. Unfortunately, I came home a bit early."

Bomb clearance is one of the most dangerous tasks in the Army. The soldier's replacement officer also suffered a similar injury.

Despite the setback Major Hambrook, who had joined up as a national serviceman in 1954, continued with army life.

He said: "Recovery comes down to self-determination. I worked hard at it and my family were very supportive. I initially had two weeks in hospital in Woolwich and then started my rehab back home. It was not the end of the world, some people suffered much more than I did."

Major Hambrook served for another 10 years. During that time he also joined Blesma (The British Limbless Ex-Service Men's Association).

He became a welfare officer for the group in Kent and is now the South East chairman.

He said: "We have a number of welfare reps throughout Kent trying to make life easier for our amputees. When someone joins Blesma they are a member for life. Our youngest member is 18 and our oldest is 92."

"We have new members joining from Afghanistan. Sadly their injuries seem to be worse than ours. The IED explosions are more powerful. Sometimes we have triple amputees."

Major Hambrook will be at the Cenotaph in London on Sunday remembering those who made the ultimate sacrifice for their country, and also meeting old friends.

He said: "I have been going since 1984. I feel

it's very important to go each year. I meet with former colleagues on the Saturday night for a dinner and then we all travel by coach."

Major Hambrook has been awarded the George Medal for his work with Blesma.

He said: "The thing about bomb disposal is it is a very close fraternity. When we get together we have a chat about old times. I still enjoyed army life despite what had happened."

ENVIRONMENT

Seaweed blamed for beach bacteria failure

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

THIS week a beach in Thanet was one of only 10 in England to fail an EU water quality test.

Walpole Bay in Margate was found to have a higher level of bacteria than acceptable after a series of tests were carried out by the Environment Agency. Many say it is caused by rotting seaweed on its shoreline.

And one councillor who represents the area says Thanet council's method's of dealing with the seaweed is just making matters worse.

Labour councillor Clive Hart said: "I saw the lorry and this pile of seaweed on the slipway. I asked the driver what he was doing and he said he was putting the seaweed on the slipway for Thanet District Council. I was told it was being put there so the tide would take it to disperse offshore."

Cllr Hart said the seaweed had been taken from nearby Palm Bay beach.

"On that bay the houses are quite a long way from the seashore but where they were dumping it was right under a block of social housing predominately occupied by elderly residents. The smell went right up to their flats.

"The tide was just taking the top off the piles and when I returned later the seaweed was just scattered all over the beach," he said.

The test result was part of the annual EU compliance survey for bathing waters in the UK carried out by the Environment Agency.

Thanet has an ongoing problem with the amount of seaweed that grows around its shoreline. Experts say the plants thrive on the chalky seabed in the area. The council has looked to see if there are alternative uses for the seaweed it recovers from its beaches every year.

Cllr Hart said: "It was particularly bad this year for the amount of seaweed. They seem to have had a policy of just moving it around."

But Thanet defended its position, saying its water quality results in general were high.

Cabinet member for environmental services, Cllr Simon Moores, said: "Firstly these results show that water quality has significantly improved across Thanet. According to the Environment Agency our water quality is excellent.

"When it comes to Walpole Bay, the results show water quality failed twice, out of a total of 19 readings. On the face of it, it seems unlikely to be caused by the seaweed in the bay and we've yet to see the evidence on which this is based.

"Thanet District Council does more than any other in the country to manage the seaweed along the coastline. We work very hard each year to remove this from our bays and, as you would expect, we target the priority bathing areas first to ensure residents and visitors can continue to enjoy our beautiful sandy beaches."

POLITICS

Tory MP Green hit by border control scandal

IMMIGRATION minister and Ashford Tory MP Damian Green has come under pressure to explain what went wrong with UK border controls this summer. He was questioned in the House of Commons about his role in the UK Border Agency scandal, and said various investigations were in place to try and discover what had gone wrong. But he put the blame squarely on the shoulders of UK Border Agency officials, saying they allegedly relaxed border checks "without the authorisation of ministers".

Race is on to buy Dreamland before regeneration cash goes out of date

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

THANET council has described the former amusement park Dreamland as a "hole" in the centre of Margate.

The park, which closed in 2005, has been at the heart of a struggle between its current owner the Margate Town Centre Regeneration Company, and the local authority.

Earlier this year the council served a Compulsory Purchase Order (CPO) on the site, which is now empty apart from its Grade-II listed Scenic Railway rollercoaster. It has set out its arguments for the CPO in a document in preparation for a public inquiry in January after the regeneration company objected to the forced sale.

Thanet council says there is a "compelling" case for its plans to transform Dreamland into the world's first amusement park dedicated to historic rides, attractions, and sideshows.

Council leader Cllr Bob Bayford said: "With the opening of Turner Contemporary, Margate has already received a huge boost this year, and Dreamland represents another huge opportunity."

The project has already received £3.7 million from the Government's Sea Change programme and £493,000 from the Heritage Lottery Fund, with a possible £3m from the lottery in the pipeline.

The council and regeneration company, which wants to build 600 homes next to the park, had been in negotiations to work together until talks broke down earlier this year.

The company has objected to the forced sale because it says the council's figures don't add up and the historic rides park could cost as much as £30m.

But Thanet council says it "became increasingly concerned that the owners... while continuing to apparently negotiate were taking no positive steps to maintain or secure investment in the site or to positively promote a new future".

The Dreamland Trust, set up to help run any new amusement park on the site, has also backed the CPO. It says government money will only be available for a set period and that the rollercoaster will soon be beyond repair.

After the public inquiry a planning inspector will prepare a report for the Secretary of State, who will make a final decision in May or June.

Star told Kent accent 'would do her no favours' in acting career

ACTRESS Gemma Arterton has revealed how she took speech lessons to lose her Kent accent.

Arterton, who shot to fame as a Bond girl in Quantum of Solace with Daniel Craig, was born and grew up in Gravesend.

But last weekend she spoke about how Stephen Frears, who directed her in the 2010 film Tamara Drewe, sent her to a vocal coach to take away her Kent accent.

Arterton, 25, told The Guardian: "When I was at Rada they did say I should change it – it wasn't going to do me any favours, is what one particular teacher told me. And so I did, but now it's just found its own 'estuarine' sound.

"It's funny because people do judge you by how you talk.

"It comes and goes. If I go back home or I'm with my dad, it comes back. If I have a drink it comes back. I remember my family getting all 'why are you talking like that?'"

Her mother Sally-Anne, was

KENTISH MAID: Gemma Arterton had speech lessons so she could lose her accent

a cleaner, and her father Barry was a welder. They divorced when she was five, and along with her sister Hannah Jane she was brought up by their mother on a council estate.

Arterton attended Painters Ash Primary School in Northfleet, then Gravesend Grammar School for Girls in Gravesend. She took a performance arts course at the Miskin Theatre in Dartford, part of North West Kent College, and trained at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art on a full grant.

She didn't realise acting could be a career until she was 16, saying: "My family was never cultural in that we never went to see plays, my mum wasn't very into films."

The star, who has appeared in big budget films such as Prince of Persia, and Clash of the Titans, and Tess of the D'Urbervilles on the BBC, described herself as a feminist working in a "male-dominated industry", and said that her mother and aunt moulded her opinions.

She told the newspaper: "They were both very instrumental in my upbringing. My aunt is a lesbian and very, very feminist. We were never manhatters or anything, just like, 'It's good to be a woman.'"

She said she is still close to her family and takes them to film sets and premiers.

Application process for primary schools opens

PARENTS in the Kent County Council catchment area have been invited to apply for their child's preferred primary school for September, 2012.

Families have until January 16, to submit their application forms.

The easiest way to do so is online at www.kent.gov.uk/ola, where families can register all their details and select up to three schools.

Paper copies of the application form are available from primary schools or by calling Kent County Council's admissions team on 01622 696565.

KCC cabinet member for education, learning and skills, Cllr Mike Whiting, said: "It's not first come, first served, so there is plenty of time to visit nearby schools and select your preferred ones."

A letter will be sent on Friday, March 30, 2012, to tell parents which school they have been offered. More information at www.kent.gov.uk/primaryadmissions.

New KCC education chief says university changes are 'worth considering'

By Steve Knight

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A REVIEW of the university admissions system which recommends students get their results before applying for a course has been welcomed by Kent's new education chief.

The Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (Ucas) argues the current procedure, where A-level pupils apply based on their predicted grades, is too complex and that changing it would aid those candidates less well-equipped to "work the system".

Patrick Leeson, who joined Kent County Council as its new corporate director for education, learning and skills late last month, said the proposals were worth considering.

The former Ofsted director said: "Clearly the business of young people getting university offers before they sit their A-levels, then going through the process of achieving their offer grades or not is an incredibly stressful time.

"At the very time they're supposed to be concentrating on getting the best grades they can, they've also got all this worry and concern that they might not get into their university of choice.

"The university clearing process can also be an extremely frustrating time for parents and their children.

"There is therefore some merit in what's been proposed, but it would mean a big change for the whole country.

"A number of headteachers think it would shorten the amount of teaching time because the exams will probably be brought forward, so there are pluses and minuses but it's definitely something that needs to be considered."

Mr Leeson was appointed as corporate director for education, learning and skills in July following a top-level restructuring at KCC.

His predecessor of sorts was Rosalind Turner, who resigned from her position as managing director of children, families and education in January, just weeks after the authority received a 'poor' rating as part of Ofsted's annual assessment of children's social services.

While Mr Leeson's newly-created position does not include social services, the former English and drama teacher is still prepared for a tough few months ahead.

"My main job is to make sure standards improve and children get better outcomes," he said. "Standards are good in secondary schools and most are either good or outstanding, which is great. But there are not enough good or outstanding primary schools. That's a key issue.

"I wouldn't put my finger on one reason why, but I do think it's partly down to secondary schools having more resources. They're bigger and there's been an awful lot more focus on their performance in recent years.

"I also think that in a county as large as Kent, there's a big issue with rural schools that are quite small and can change very quickly when they lose certain members of staff.

"But there's been an ongoing trend in recent years of primary schools forming partnerships to improve quality and ensure strong leadership, and I think that's something we need to see more of."

WORTH A LOOK: Patrick Leeson wants more good or outstanding primary schools in the county

HEALTH

Comic warning to use your A&E properly

NHS chiefs have put a series of comic videos on YouTube to try and stop inappropriate use of Kent's hospital casualty departments.

The films include women waiting for treatment for hair-dye disasters and botched false nails, a pushy mum desperate for her son to be seen by senior doctors for his diarrhoea, and even a man hoping A&E staff will turn their hands to helping out his poorly dog.

In the last 12 months it is estimated that more than 700,000 people went to A&E departments in the South of England, when they could have been treated and advised by their local pharmacist or GP, or could have looked after themselves at home.

Calls for new powers to tackle cable theft

RAIL chiefs have called for tougher measures in dealing with cable theft after a rise in incidents.

In Kent, the number of thefts on the railways has risen over the last four years by 180 to 305.

At a meeting of the Transport Select Committee, representatives from Network Rail, the Association of Train Operating Companies and the British Transport Police also called for new measures to help reduce disruption to passengers caused by cable theft.

Dyan Crowther, director operational services at Network Rail, said: "Britain is under attack from metal thieves. Every day hundreds of passengers and essential freight deliveries are being disrupted and delayed."

APPEAL

Neighbours' plea to find Asbo artist's daughter for funeral

By Dan Carrier

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN APPEAL has been launched to track down the estranged daughter of one of the country's oldest Asbo recipients, who died last month.

Terence O'Rourke, 71, who had 19 aliases and often claimed to be the illegitimate son of the famed British painter Francis Bacon, passed away after a battle with pneumonia, blood poisoning and diabetes.

There were plans to bury him in a so-called 'pauper's grave' due to his apparent lack of family and funds to pay for a funeral, but neighbours in the Dartmouth Park district of Camden, north London – including top civil servant Sir Christopher Kelly and his wife Alison – have stepped in to help.

They want to find Mr O'Rourke's only daughter, who is believed to live in Kent, so she at least has the chance to be at his funeral.

Mrs Kelly, whose husband is best known for heading the inquiry into MPs' expenses, said: "Terence would often talk about a child he

CHARACTER: Despite being the oldest man to receive an Asbo, friends say there was another side to keen painter Terence O'Rourke had called Marie or Maureen, who he believed was living on a farm in Kent.

"We would very much like to contact her to let her know her father has passed away, and give her the option of attending his funeral. We desperately want to find her."

Mr O'Rourke, who claimed his mother slept with Francis Bacon while working as his housekeeper, was a well known figure in the Dartmouth Park area but largely because of an unenviable record of being the oldest man in the borough to be given an anti-social behaviour order.

He was known for his aggressive behaviour, which included drinking heavily and abusing people in the street, and was issued with the Asbo in January last year after police had received persistent complaints.

In his defence, friends said he was a man with problems who lacked the help he needed to overcome them.

Mr O'Rourke died at the Royal Free Hospital in Hampstead on October 4.

The hospital was due to bury him in a communal grave, but after going through his belongings staff found Sir Christopher's telephone number.

Sir Christopher was named as the executor of Mr O'Rourke's will, which kick-started the search for his daughter and a plan to cover a proper funeral.

Mrs Kelly said Mr O'Rourke's reputation on Camden's streets was such that many shunned him.

She said: "He could be very difficult, but there was another side to him that a few of us got to know."

Friends remembered a keen painter who filled his home with his own works, and roses in his front garden – he loved nothing more than to talk to passers by about rose growing.

Yet his infamy was underlined when magistrates issued a court order in January last year.

He was then 69 and the court heard he had a string of misdemeanours including prodding people with his walking stick, harassing women with lewd behaviour, urinating in the street, and also shouting racist abuse at a bus driver.

Youth choir's TV slot for Children in Need

KENT County Junior Choir will be singing live on national TV at Bluewater shopping centre to help raise funds for BBC's Children in Need on Friday, November 18.

The 60-strong choir, made up of youngsters from all over Kent, will be conducted by Gareth Malone, choirmaster and award-winning broadcaster of the hit TV reality show The Choir.

They will be singing Keep Holding On along with choirs at different locations across the country as part of a live link-up with Gareth conducting all of them from BBC's Children in Need studio.

Jo Fitzmaurice, who manages the choirs for Kent Music, said: "Our junior choir is very excited about performing on TV. The age range is 11 to 15 and although they do sing at public events, they will probably be a little nervous as it's such a privilege to be singing live on national television for Children in Need."

The choir meets once a month on a Saturday, with rehearsals alternating between Rochester and Maidstone. Admission is by audition, and details can be found at www.kent-music.com.

CRIME

No charges after bomb hoax arrests

TWO people arrested as part of a probe into the Canterbury bomb hoax which brought the city to a halt have now been released without charge.

The man and a woman, both from Kent, had been arrested following a high profile appeal for information on BBC One's Crimewatch.

CCTV images of four people wanted in connection with the offence were broadcast on the show last Thursday.

The 41-year-old woman and 52-year-old man were detained by police following raids at addresses in Kent.

Police launched the appeal because they said the hoax may have been an elaborate warm-up for a more serious crime. They feared a crime gang might have been involved in the hoax when two devices were planted in the city. It sparked a huge alert, closing much of the city centre.

Police released CCTV images of three women buying mobile phones in the West End of London which were used to alert police and news organisations to the bomb scare.

Det Chief Insp Tom Richards said: "I would encourage anyone who thinks they have any information to get in touch on 01303 289600 or call Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111."

A20 tunnel works start – but drivers will suffer delays until January

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

WORK to resolve the Roundhill tunnel traffic jam hotspot on the A20 near Folkestone will get under way this weekend.

Traffic has been grinding to a halt as a result of expansion joints on the viaduct needing replacement – with a 30mph speed limit enforced and traffic-slowing measures bringing round-the-clock delays.

Work to fix the road has been delayed due to the essential joints needing to be made in mainland Europe.

Now the Highways Agency has confirmed the work will begin on Sunday, but it will not be completed until January.

And it will mean more problems for motorists with the closure of separate carriageways overnight.

The essential joints allow the structure to expand and contract with seasonal changes in temperature. Since those on the viaduct failed, plates have been installed as a temporary measure to cover the components and ensure the A20 remains open safely. Once the joints have been replaced, the plates can be removed.

NO MORE JAMS: The works are due to end in January

Highways Agency project leader Arvind Ranpuria said: "The work has been planned to cause as little disruption as possible and will be carried out as quickly as possible. Weather permitting, it will be complete before the end of January.

"The temporary plates have allowed us to have, latterly, two lanes of traffic running coast-bound and one lane London-bound. We are now extra plates made so that, during the day, traffic will soon be able to run on two lanes London-bound too. The temporary 30mph speed restriction will remain in place.

"While the road is closed overnight we will also take the opportunity to carry out some necessary resurfacing."

The work will take place from 8pm-6am, when traffic flows are lowest and will be carried out seven days a week. One carriageway at a time will be closed.

Signed diversions will be in operation while the closures are in place.

Police demand review of music festival's licence

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

ORGANISERS of one of Kent's largest music festivals have defended the event after reports that it could lose its licence next year.

Lounge on the Farm, held at Merton Farm near Canterbury, attracted thousands of music fans when it was held in July.

But there were also reports of sexual assault, robbery, thefts from tents, drink and drug abuse, and parking problems.

Headline acts at the three day event were Katy B, Echo and the Bunnymen, and The Streets.

Police say complaints were up by 50 per cent and they had to deal with 20 incidents.

However, the man who started Lounge on the Farm, Sean Baker, said the festival had doubled in size in recent years so a rise in incidents should not be unexpected.

Canterbury City Council had agreed to double the capacity of the event from 5,000 to 10,000 in 2011.

Mr Baker said: "Lounge on the Farm is about bringing music to people in a positive environment. It is sad that at every music festival there is a small percentage of people who will behave anti-socially.

"The festival has been running since 2006 as an event that is respected and enjoyed by all who attend."

Mr Baker said he had already addressed some of the problems that led to festival goers parking in nearby country roads and would continue to invest in organisation and security.

He said: "We work hard to take proactive measures to prevent problems. Planning for the festival begins each August and this year one of our first jobs was to procure an additional 50 acres for parking on site for 2012 to address our parking issues of the last event.

"We have also employed an event management company with expertise in festivals to assist us with the long-term planning and development of Lounge on the Farm."

Canterbury City Council's licensing panel will be discussing the event on December 13. A spokesman said police had requested a review of the licence on four grounds: the prevention of crime and disorder, public safety, prevention of public nuisance, and the protection of children from harm.

Mr Baker said he wanted the community to engage with the organisers so any problems could be reduced.

He said the festival, which last year had Archant KOS Media as a media partner, benefited local business and the community.

"We are very sorry to anyone who was adversely affected and would like the opportunity to resolve any issues," he said.

Tickets for next year's event are already on sale. Mr Baker said ticket money already received has been ring-fenced so people will get it back if the licence is revoked.

Kent Police said they could not comment on the festival until after the hearing with the licensing committee.

If you want to make any comments to the council you can write to Licensing, Canterbury City Council, Military Road, Canterbury CT1 1YW, or email licensing@canterbury.gov.uk. The closing date for comments is November 21.

CRIME

Authorities to crackdown on the anti-social youths

POLICE and council chiefs are cracking down on a trouble zone in Dover where youngsters – some as young as 10 – have thrown bricks at windows and carried out a host of other anti-social acts.

But now a dispersal order will be in place for the next six months, giving police the power to order people to leave the area of St Radigund's if they are found causing "intimidation, harassment, alarm or distress".

It comes after reports of incidents including youngsters running on the roofs of Buckland Hospital.

Those moved under the order cannot return to the area within 24 hours and young people under 16 can be taken home to their parents.

Those who ignore the order risk a three-month jail sentence or maximum £2,500 fine.

In just six months there have been more than 90 calls to Kent Police about youngsters and anti-social behaviour in St Radigund's.

FACT AND FICTION: Ian Fleming created the 30 Assault Unit, whose members fought in World War Two

Real role models for 007 finally revealed

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

MOST famous as the creator of James Bond, writer Ian Fleming is the subject of a new book detailing the real-life heroics of his own band of World War Two warriors.

Ian Fleming's Commandos is the title of a work by Nicholas Rankin which tells the story of 30 Assault Unit (30 AU) – who the book calls “the real life inspiration” for 007.

Fleming lived in St Margaret's Bay after he brought the house called White Cliffs, in 1952. The house, which is white with lime-green shutters and a red roof can be identified at the north end of the beach. It was his weekend and holiday home for the decade in which he conceived and wrote the first of the James Bond books.

And Rankin's book describes how his true-life activities inspired some of the fiction which was to follow.

It tells of how as Germany fell in 1945, crack teams of Allied commandos swept the country to find key Nazi intelligence.

Among those scouring the remains of the Fatherland were 30 AU, who seized scientist Dr Helmut Walter and a film detailing proposed wonder-weapons including jet hydrofoils, radio-controlled bombs and a prototype for a ballistic missile submarine.

Naval Intelligence Commander Fleming had put together the group to rival the German Abwehrkommando, a joint-service group to steal enemy equipment and intelligence.

HEROES: Fleming's wartime exploits detailed in new book

And surely he gained inspiration for the gadgetry in the Bond novels from the bizarre creations revealed by the investigations of his unit.

Fleming had tried his hand at journalism and in the stock market prior to the war.

It was after fighting broke out that he finally found a role that suited him, as personal assistant to the Director of Naval Intelligence. He was appointed a lieutenant in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, rising later to the rank of commander.

Here his flair and imagination were in full force as he created 30 ACU, co-ordinated propaganda, and devised elaborate undercover sabotage operations, and was sent abroad on special duties to Tangier and America.

The most impressive action by 30 AU saw the seizure of the entire archives of the German Navy – more than 300 tonnes of documents.

Rankin also writes about

Fleming's plans for covert operations in North Africa and one of his ploys to hijack an Enigma machine-bearing torpedo boat in the English Channel with disguised commandos – allegedly hatched with his brother Peter at a property the family owned just outside Wye.

A number of the personalities in the book display decidedly Bond-like characteristics such as Patrick Dalzel-Job who ended the war as a lieutenant-commander, having spent much of the conflict harrying the enemy in Norway.

During his service he navigated a miniature submarine, he was a crack shot and could ski backwards, and he had a compass concealed in one of his buttons.

Trevor James 'Sancho' Glanville is another possible for the inspiration behind 007. Glanville served in nearly every campaign of 30 AU, took the surrender of the Italians, German and Japanese admirals, and earned the respect of all ranks for his courage, compassion, comradeship and cool common-sense.

Last year St Margaret's Bay was used as the location for a number of scenes in a film of the exploits of 30 AU, entitled Age of Heroes and starring Sean Bean.

However it is another way the true-life exploits of Fleming's men has been commemorated. And their story – kept secret for many years – is now being told with Rankin's book the definitive work.

Return of taxpayers' millions from Icelandic banks won't stop the cuts

Our budget pressures will be here to stay, says Kent County Council's cabinet member for finance and business support Cllr John Simmonds

FOLLOWING the news that Kent County Council will be first in line to get its deposits back from Icelandic banks, KCC's Cllr John Simmonds explains what will happen to the money:

The likely return of the money that Kent County Council deposited with Icelandic banks has created a sense of expectation that the authority might not have to make any further savings in its budget.

The truth is that when these funds do return, they will have little or no effect on the work we are doing to respond to the £95 million of growing pressures on our budget and reduced funding from government.

Let me explain how the deposits made by KCC with the Icelandic banks were made up. Of the £50 million deposited with banks in Iceland, £33 million came from KCC funds and the remaining £17 million belonged to the Kent pension fund and the fire authority.

The £33 million was part of our cash flow, similar to having money in your current account to handle routine bills.

The council has £250 million-£300 million available at any one time, which is about five weeks of turnover.

This money consists of our reserves and government grants and is used to meet a wide range of payments across children's and adult's services, as well as overheads, such as salaries, premises costs and utility bills.

To make sure that we get the best that we can from public money, the government encouraged us to get the best possible return.

This is why we made the deposits with British and Icelandic banks.

When those banks had difficult times, the British government bailed out its banks, but the Icelandic government could not do the same. However, the Icelandic banks had good assets, making it possible for KCC to get most, if not all, of the money back.

When the Icelandic deposits were frozen, KCC was able to cope with the impact of the Icelandic bank difficulties on its cash flow without any effect on frontline services.

It is important to understand that none of the changes to KCC's budget have been because of the difficulties with the Icelandic deposits. KCC did, however, make some provision in case not all of the money was returned.

There may not be any capital loss at all

We are expecting the funds from Icelandic banks to be returned over a 12-18 month period.

From the £33 million mentioned above, we had set aside £6.5 million as a reserve and, as the Icelandic money is returned, this will become available to support services.

If the money had not been returned to KCC, there would have been an impact on services. This is not the case, however, and the money will be returned. Despite the difficulties, there may not be any capital loss at all.

If we are also successful in our claim for interest – based on the anticipated recovery rates for each Icelandic bank – we could end up recovering more than our original £50 million deposit. This is not yet certain but a very real possibility.

Time to remember their brave sacrifice

REMEMBRANCE Day began after the terrible slaughter of young men on the battlefields of World War One.

The last veterans of that conflict are now gone. Sadly, the Great War turned out not to be the war to end all wars.

British forces have continued to fight around the world in places such as Korea, Malaya and the Falklands.

That loss of life continues to this day. Men and women of the Armed Forces are being killed in Afghanistan, or returning with terrible injuries.

Whatever the rights or wrongs of any conflict, this Sunday is a time to remember their sacrifice.

Don't forget a box of matches for the torch

IT seems that the Olympic flame will be visiting virtually every town and village in the country before making it to Stratford. Organisers have admitted there is a possibility that it could get blown out.

If you are one of the lucky ones chosen to relay the torch, pray it doesn't happen on your watch.

Airport dream is a nightmare

There have been a raft of proposals for multi-billion pound air and rail transport schemes around London and the Thames Estuary.

The RSPB is fully aware of the economic, housing and development needs of the region and welcomes plans to look at issues on a big scale.

Spurred on by London Mayor Boris Johnson, Sir Norman Foster is the latest architect-designer to showcase his skills, following in the footsteps of Sir Terry Farrell, and engineer Doug Oakervee. All have tabled drawings featuring big transport developments as a means for tapping global markets.

Putting the environment first should be our priority. This would inform development for attractive housing with infrastructure and home-grown jobs to match, while sympathetically enhancing our countryside for wildlife, recreation and leisure.

The Thames estuary is a unique and special place, unrivalled across Europe and cannot be reproduced on the same scale. Its current status is the result of years of partnership working and campaigning, not least by some very passionate local people.

Sir Norman Foster's giant air, rail and road hub on the Isle of Grain in north Kent, connected to a transport spine running northwards, ignores basic and well-publicised facts. His plans suggest the area is largely un-populated. Research carried out for the Government's 2003 aviation white paper concluded that an airport in the same area would mean the destruction of 1,100 homes. On top of that it would be the highest risk airport in the country for bird strikes by far. And finally, it is UK Government policy that there will be no airport expansion in the South East.

Aspirational architecture and design is about improving what's precious to us all; building homes and communities in spaces that benefit our physical and mental well-being. Places where nature and people meet and prosper. Let's invest in these 'Futurescapes' and abandon fantasy airfields.

Martin Harper,
Director of conservation,
RSPB

Remember flying heroes

This Remembrance Sunday, as our thoughts turn to the sacrifices made by members of the Armed Forces, I would ask your readers to spare a moment for the remarkable men and women of the Royal Air Force.

Today the RAF is deployed worldwide, defending our skies at home and supporting our troops in Afghanistan, as well as playing a vital role in toppling the tyrannical regime of Colonel Gaddafi in Libya.

Seventy years ago the RAF was just as stretched, flying to defend the UK, Malta, Egypt, and the Atlantic supply lines. Like their successors they also fought to defeat a tyrant regime. By then we had won the Battle of Britain, but bomber missions over Hitler's Germany during November, 1941, were hazardous in the extreme, with crews suffering a loss rate of around 10 per cent.

The RAF Benevolent Fund was on hand then and is still here today, supporting all generations of the Royal Air Force, including those currently serving. Our mission is to honour their sacrifice by looking after the RAF family, helping to repay what Winston Churchill called the 'Debt We Owe' to all RAF personnel.

At this time of giving thanks I would urge anyone with a Royal Air Force background who is in need of help or support to contact our free advice line on 0800 169 2942 or via our website at www.rafbf.org for details.

You can also find out ways of getting involved with our work. We receive no government funding and could not do what we do without the magnificent support we receive from the RAF and general public.

I would like to close by paying my own tribute to all those serving in the RAF today. Their bravery, commitment and enduring spirit are worthy of the highest traditions of the Royal Air Force, and this Remembrance Sunday we will stop to give thanks for all that the RAF does in defence of our freedom.

Air Marshal
Sir Robert Wright,
Controller,
RAF Benevolent Fund

Tolls add to country's ruin

So, the price increases at the Dartford Crossing are going ahead, despite an overwhelming 'no' vote from the public, motoring groups, road haulage, and industry at large, to the Government's latest consultation.

This crossing already makes vast profits, so any new price rises are unjustified and will just help feed our upward spiralling inflation rate.

In a couple of months' time, we will see the tightening up of the London low emissions zone and then in a couple of years time, lorry road-user charging.

All of which eventually has to be paid for by the citizens of this country by higher prices and making British products more uncompetitive in world markets.

Tackling the rubbish birds

Re: Your article on gulls ripping open rubbish bags.

We suffered with this problem for many years in our street, like many others in Dover. Living by the sea you will get a visit from the gulls and be woken at daybreak by their loud call, but I think Dover District Council may have solved our problem for most residents by issuing us with wheelie bins. Unless they gang up and learn to lift the lids I think our problem has been solved.

My advice to the unfortunate residents who still have to use bags would be to double up on your bags, so making it harder for the gulls to penetrate.

Send criminals to island prison

I have now become the victim of what is the truth about crime figures, which are soaring not dropping.

Warn everyone in Bitchington and Thanet for that matter, they are after jewellery and money. That's apart from the damage they cause.

The police were great when they got here. It's not their fault there is a lack of their presence about now days.

Yet another cost cut affecting all of the public services. There needs to be more police not less.

All the criminals know this. So Joe Public, we need to catch these anti-other people individuals who don't give a care about anyone but themselves. Keep your eyes open. We can help our police forces catch them.

Forget about giving them social orders. If we haven't got enough prison space ship them to uninhabited islands where they can just care about themselves and see how they survive then.

What to do with our daughter's windfall?

Q Our 16-year-old daughter has been left £50,000, with us, her parents, named as trustees with responsibility for investing the money until she is 21. Can you suggest a few safe five-year investments, keeping back a small sum that would be accessible for education costs, if necessary?

A Because you will have to hand over the fund to your daughter as soon as she reaches 21, there is not enough time for most investments to prove themselves, particularly without taking risks. You can rule out anything connected to the stock market, land, property and life assurance.

That leaves completely safe premium bonds and national savings products, and bank or building society accounts that are covered by the £85,000 compensation scheme. Premium bonds allow an investment of up to £30,000.

Your daughter could win a little or nothing, but she could strike it rich and, of course, the bonds can be encashed at any time. Growth bonds and savings certificates, both fixed and index-linked, are currently not on sale, which rules them out.

Northern Rock is offering 3.3pc on its Little Rock fixed-rate children's bond. This matures in September 2014, so if interest rates rise sharply you would still have a chance to reinvest. And Yorkshire Bank pays a fixed 4.25pc on its five-year bond. I would opt for £30,000 in premium bonds and £20,000 in Yorkshire Bank.

Your daughter may not make a fortune, but she cannot lose.

Q We have a house with planning permission for a building plot in the garden. If we put the house and plot up for sale separately, would it make any difference to the tax position if one sold before the other?

A Assuming the house is your main or only home, it is exempt from capital gains tax on sale. This includes the garden, as long as the house and garden together are not larger than 5,000 square metres.

I cannot see that the order in which they are sold would affect this exemption. The final three years of ownership are tax-exempt anyway, even if you yourself have moved out.

Q I am in dispute with a hire purchase firm over unfair penalty charges. Is it best to complain to trading standards, or what?

A Hire purchase disputes can be investigated by the Financial Ombudsman (0800 023 4567), who has the power to order the firm to treat you fairly and, if justified, pay you compensation.

Q I received a letter from the Prize Winners Club, saying I have been included in a prize promotion and asking me to contact the firm for details. The prizes include various sums of up to £20,000. Is this a scam?

A The Prize Winners Club is based in Ross-on-Wye in Herefordshire and it is part of a genuine company called McIntyre & Dodd Marketing. The prizes exist, too. The letter you received mentions cash sums ranging from £25 to £20,000, though a claim form on the reverse also mentions supermarket shopping vouchers. In fact, the closing date for claiming a prize has already passed, but it is interesting that you suspect there must be something questionable about the scheme. The key lies in the wording of the letter, which includes a "unique ID number", and says: "You have definitely won one of our valuable prizes (minimum £25, maximum £20,000 cash) if your unique ID matches any one of the winning ID numbers." Given the name – Prize Winners Club – and the emphasis on the size of the prizes on offer, it would be easy to assume that you have won one.

Wrong! What this boils down to is an offer to sell you an entry in a sweep-stake. The company wants you to call a premium rate number to find out whether your ID number has won any prize at all, and the cost of that call is about £9. The bottom line is that you would be spending £9 and might get absolutely nothing in return. Or, to be fair, you just might win £20,000. Since McIntyre & Dodd Marketing is a commercial business, you can take it that it is in this to make a profit and has judged that the money it earns from its premium rate phone number will more than match the cost of providing the prizes. The Office of Fair Trading has taken action against this company in the past and won a court order stopping it from breaching consumer protection rules.

DIVIDE: About 80 per cent of web users are happy banking online, but users over-55 are less likely to do so

Popularity of online banking increases

THE trend towards online banking is continuing, with its ease and convenience meaning that a quarter of internet users now check their accounts online on a daily basis.

About 80pc of web users are confident about making online banking transactions, and that figure rises to 90pc for people aged between 25 and 34.

However, there is still a big divide between the age groups, with only a quarter of people aged over 55 having ever banked online, according to research by Payyourway, an education campaign run by the Payments Council.

The campaign is highlighting a series of safety tips about online banking.

Its advice includes checking for a locked padlock or an unbroken key symbol in the browser window, which indicates that the site is secure. You should also make sure that the start of the web address changes from "http" to "https" once you have logged in.

Another key thing to remember is never to access a banking website via a link in an email.

Instead, make sure you type in the bank's website address manually, otherwise you could find yourself clicking through to a fake site run by fraudsters.

Pipes check could save you heartache

By Adam Aiken

adam.aiken@archant.co.uk

A QUICK check on your pipes can help spare you from winter misery once the big freeze gets under way.

Hundreds of homes were drenched last winter by burst pipes. The average cost of the damage was £8,000, according to insurer Aviva, with many claims worth a lot more.

Whole ceilings can be brought down by a burst pipe, and it can take months for a home to dry out after the event.

Even though insurance will cover most of your losses, it will do little to compensate you for the hassle or any damage to heirlooms and irreplaceable personal possessions.

Rob Townend, director of household claims at Aviva, said: "Although it has been a relatively mild autumn, it is easy to forget how quickly temperatures can plummet, and many homeowners were caught out by the severe weather at the beginning of last winter.

"Freezing and burst pipes can be a real problem – in some cases ruining entire floors of your home. The risk can be worse in traditional properties without modern heating systems or properly insulated pipes.

"And when homes are left empty, burst or leaking pipes often aren't discovered for many days and so damage can get progressively worse."

For that reason, see if you can ask a neighbour to keep a check on your property if you are away. Pipes burst when they start to thaw, so if someone can pop round when that happens, there is a greater chance that any leak can be spotted early before it does its worst.

John Miles, business development director at price-comparison website Gocompare.com, said: "A burst pipe can be a major catastrophe, especially if it isn't spotted early.

"The worst damage is done when the thaw comes and the water flows through the burst.

"Water can cause a huge amount of damage to ceilings and walls as well as furniture and carpets, and the cost of repairs and replacements can run into tens of thousands of pounds.

"Insulating your water pipes is a good preventative measure to help avoid burst pipes.

"You can buy mineral wool tape to wrap around your pipes at most DIY shops and it's a pretty easy job."

Science kit to rent: the company with a wholly new plan

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

TWO former Pfizer employees have set up an innovative rental company at Kent Science Park, near Sittingbourne.

Flexible Lab Solutions provides science-based companies, research organisations and universities with the option of leasing hi-tech devices on short-term contracts, avoiding the hefty outlay of buying the machines.

It is Europe's first laboratory-equipment rental company specialising in liquid handlers and microplate readers.

The firm, which also carries out laboratory-equipment servicing, was launched six weeks ago by Tom Martin and David Reed.

Companies moving to the park have praised the way that contracts can be flexible. Initial floorspace can be quite small, with the option of expansion should it be necessary or required.

They also say that start-up deals offered at the Swale park compare favourably with those offered elsewhere.

The pair spent a total of 21 years at the pharmaceutical giant's Sandwich research-and-development site, which announced that it was closing earlier this year.

Technical director Martin said the company, which has taken 1,400 sq ft at Kent Science Park, is the only one of its kind operating in the UK and Europe.

"The business model is built upon what we believe is missing from the industry," he said. "Companies spend a large proportion of their capital budget on lab equipment, which is often only required for a short period of time.

"We can give customers the option of renting whatever kit they require, for however long they need it. This can significantly reduce a company's costs at a time when budgets are being reined in more than ever, and we believe it will be of particular interest to new business start-ups.

"Industry interest been fantastic. We've already sent out our first order to the United States. We have a range of 35 products at present but hope to supply the latest hi-tech equipment direct from suppliers. We're having these exciting conversations with a number of suppliers at the moment."

Martin said Kent Science Park provided the perfect base for the business: "We were very impressed with the facilities and the park's excellent transport links to the county, London and the rest of Britain. The refurbishment work the park has undertaken will surely appeal to other Pfizer spin-out companies, hopefully providing us with more customers."

Park site-director James Speck said: "Kent Science Park offers specialist laboratory space to science-based firms of all sizes, making it ideal for spin-out companies.

"We have undertaken a major refurbishment project at the park to ensure we are perfectly placed to accommodate start-ups as well as established firms, ensuring the skilled workers from Pfizer – and across the country – have access to high-quality, cost-effective office and lab space in Kent.

"Flexible Lab Solutions service fits perfectly with what we are doing at KSP."

New recycling chief named at paper plant

GEMMA Barratt has been announced as the new head of recycling at Aylesford Newsprint and will take up the position from the end of November.

Barratt, pictured, who joined the company in 2006, is Aylesford's recycling operations manager responsible for the recovered fibre store and management of recovered paper on site.

She will be in charge of both the area manager team, responsible for sourcing material across the UK, and her existing operations team.

Barratt acknowledged that it's a challenging time to be taking on her new role but said: "I will have an excellent team both out in the field and at the mill whose combined efforts will focus on supporting our suppliers and partners, both existing and new, building relationships to secure the continuous supply of good-quality material and ensuring Aylesford's enduring reputation for service excellence is maintained."

She stressed that while the new strategy will evolve, the department's suppliers and partners were unlikely to notice any major operational changes.

FUNDING

Port welcomes investment boost to kick-start regeneration of area

THE Port of Dover has welcomed the news that east Kent's bid for a £40 million Regional Growth Fund has been successful.

Port bosses say that, spread across the districts of Dover, Shepway, Canterbury and Thanet, the fund will support a programme of direct grants for businesses to expand. The news comes as the Port of Dover continues to develop its own plans.

With a combined cash and share value of £30 million and an additional £1 million per year in cash for the first five years, the Port of Dover Community Trust (PDCT) will target the Dover community, covering priorities ranging from business start-up support to skills and education.

Bob Goldfield, port chief executive, said: "We are delighted east Kent will be receiving Government funding to support its businesses.

"This complements the significant investment planned for Dover through the PDCT, which will act as a catalyst for regeneration and social and economic improvement."

The establishment of the PDCT is now dependent on the Government giving the go-head for its restructuring proposals so that it is freed from any current constraints.

Guide ranks solicitors as leading way ahead

LAW firm Thomson Snell & Passmore has achieved outstanding rankings in this year's Chambers & Partners awards and has 20 lawyers recognised as Leaders In Their Field – retaining its position as one of the region's leading law firms.

Chambers & Partners is one of the foremost independent guides to the legal profession.

This year the firm, based in Tunbridge Wells and Greenhithe, has added new ranking criteria of client service – for which the clinical-negligence and family teams have been recommended – and commercial awareness – where the dispute-resolution and employment teams have been recommended.

The clinical-negligence team maintains its tier-one ranking and is described as "informative and personable" and providing a "very professional service".

Patricia Fearnley, partner and joint head of the team, is described as "thorough and approachable" and her colleague Fiona Mills is praised for knowing "the right experts to instruct and is very good at client care". The team has also been recommended for client service.

Senior partner James Partridge said: "Everybody has been working hard."

AWARD

Industry recognition for quality demolition work

A KENT specialist business has won a global industry award at an event in Amsterdam.

Lee Demolition, based in Gravesend, scooped the Industrial Demolition award at the world trade awards for the field.

The award recognised the firm's completion of a £3.5million 20-acre site clearance of the former SCA Packaging plant in New Hythe.

The project saw Lee Demolition dismantle and demolish a paper-manufacturing plant next to New Hythe train station, requiring a complete bridge lift.

The firm worked with Network Rail, introducing innovative propping and protection measures to ensure that at no time was rail use or the timetable interrupted. Lee Demolition completed the work on time and to budget.

Director David Lee said: "These awards are our industry's highlight, so to win here is a real marker for our business and the quality of work we carry out.

"This was a particularly complex project, environmentally and logistically, and required our entire advanced fleet of plant equipment and 40 staff on site. This award is testament to all our staff's hard work throughout the project."

Lee Demolition also employed environmental-impact mitigation techniques to ensure there were no spillages or contamination of the Medway River, next to the site. Of the site materials, 99 per cent were either reused or recycled.

NETWORKING

Website helps firms meet up for success

SWALE MP Gordon Henderson's business website, the Sittingbourne and Sheppey Link 2 Business (www.blinkss.co.uk), has reached 10,000 hits since it was created in January.

It was set up for local businesses to be kept up to date with business news and information as well as have a direct link for advice.

In October, the website took a new direction by incorporating news for the voluntary and community sector in Sittingbourne and Sheppey and a directory of local organisations in an effort to link the local business, voluntary and community sectors together.

Henderson said: "The website and the business breakfasts have proved very successful over the last year and I hope this continues in 2012.

"Its success is entirely thanks to all the local businesses and voluntary organisations who have so far supported the initiative."

In addition to the website, Henderson also hosts monthly business breakfasts, some of which are themed for discussing specific issues affecting local businesses.

Danny Peters and Gail O'Marra of Rocque Recycling in Queenborough have attended a number of these business breakfasts over the last year.

They said: "As a young enterprising company back in 2010, we found the website and the regular breakfast meetings invaluable to the growth of our business.

"Fifteen months on and not only do we visit the website regularly but we attend the breakfast meetings at every opportunity.

"The networking opportunities have been and continue to be hugely beneficial, and the direct contact with our local MP Gordon Henderson and his dedicated team is priceless."

Government slammed for rejecting apprenticeships bid for small businesses

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A GOVERNMENT decision to reject a Regional Growth Fund bid to support the creation of apprenticeships in small businesses across five counties including Kent has been described as a "slap in the face" by the Federation of Small Businesses (FSB).

No explanation has been put forward, says the group, but it feels that it will do a lot of harm to those looking to start in work.

The federation added that it would be putting pressure on the Government to consider the matter again.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "The FSB in five counties – East Sussex, Essex, Kent, Norfolk and Suffolk – joined forces with the five county councils plus Medway, Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock unitary authorities to submit an application to the Regional Growth Fund to support the creation of new apprenticeship places in around 250,000 small and medium-sized companies across the five counties.

SO DISAPPOINTED: Roger House, of the FSB

"This was a unique application that brought together the South East Local Enterprise Partnership (SELEP) and the New Anglia Local Enterprise Partnership in an innovative application to create more than 3,500 much-needed jobs for young people while supporting the growth of small businesses, which the Prime Minister David Cameron and his Government have repeatedly said will rescue our ailing economy.

"Sadly, it seems the vision contained in this application was one which could not be understood by Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg, Lord Heseltine, Secretaries of State Vince Cable and Eric Pickles and the others on the panel considering these applications, and this week we were told they had rejected the application.

"At the moment we have no explanation why the bid was rejected, but what we do know is that this decision is a slap in the face for small businesses looking for a small amount of Government support – some £2,500 each – to provide employment and training for an unemployed young person in our area.

"We will be asking why an application described as 'very strong' has been rejected in this way and will be pressing the Government to think again about how they can help create this type of job in small businesses."

Say cheese for cross-Channel sales

ENTREPRENEUR George Ward has achieved the gastronomic equivalent of selling snow to Eskimos – he's selling Kent's cheese to the French.

Ward has signed up Histoire Ancienne, a popular bistro in the centre of Calais, for an order of Kelly's Canterbury Goat, one of many cheeses produced by Cheesemakers Of Canterbury to use for a sauce for scallops.

He also has bookings from Tony L'Estienne, chef patron of Michelin-starred La Matelote in Boulogne, and a host of other outlets requesting a tasting.

Ward said: "The reaction to Kentish cheeses was two-phase. Phase one – do you make decent cheese in England? Phase two – wow, great flavour!

"I'm immensely proud of the reaction our cheeses had, and warmed by the attitude of the French towards them.

QUALITY: The French are learning there's so much more to British cheese

"Having thought our only cheese was an orange-coloured Cheddar that came in huge rectangular blocks, they now know there is a real renaissance of cheeses of all varieties awaiting them."

The move is being backed by Transmanche Enterprise Network (TEN), a three-year project with the aim of promoting and encouraging entrepreneurs and businesses to develop new cross-border commercial initiatives.

The project is delivered by six partners, with Medway Council acting as the lead partner; the other partners are Canterbury City Council, POM West Flanders Development Agency, Boulogne Chamber of Commerce, Boulogne Development Cote d'Opale and the North of France Business Incubators Network (Les ruches d'entreprises du Nord).

Project development officer Natalia Sukhram said: "Feedback on the project so far has been very positive. One of the unique ways in which we are able to support SMEs is by providing them access to contacts they would not otherwise be able to reach."

New business development manager joins formulated products team

LEADING pharmaceutical manufacturer Aesica has announced a key appointment at its Formulated Products (FP) team.

James Rogers takes up the role of business development manager at Queenborough, having worked for Aesica's Active Pharmaceutical Ingredients (API) team for 10 years.

The 33-year-old has 11 years of experience within the pharmaceutical industry and moved across to Aesica when the company bought the Abbott manufacturing facility in 2007.

Rogers said: "I am looking forward to building on my API experience in the exciting arena of Formulated Products.

"The Aesica offering continues to expand, with many opportunities to deliver reliable and cost-effective solutions for our growing portfolio of customers."

Alan Raymond, sales and marketing director for Aesica, said: "James's appointment is strategically important to the business as we continue to enhance our global presence and reputation while expanding into new markets.

"Our recent acquisition of three UCB sites in Europe demonstrates our commitment to enhancing our Formulated Products service offering."

Rising fuel costs put pressure on transport firms

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THREE out of four transport operators in Kent have had to pass on increasing fuel costs to their customers, according to a survey.

The Freight Transport Association asked its locally-based members whether the rising cost of fuel over the last 12 months had influenced behaviour. More than 70 per cent of respondents said they had increased their rates, with over one in five admitting having reduced the number of drivers in their workforce.

Also almost half are "likely" and almost one third "certain" to pass on costs further in the following year.

Natalie Chapman, FTA's head of policy for Kent, said: "These results demonstrate how much pressure Kent's transport operators are under. With profit margins in the industry already wafer-thin, the prospect of having to absorb two further planned fuel-duty rises in 2012 does not bode well and we fear more redundancies and insolvencies in the sector."

"Fuel accounts for around 40 per cent of the cost of running a heavy truck, so rising fuel prices are an extremely daunting prospect for many in the industry."

The annual claimant-count statistic for HGV-drivers in Kent has doubled since 2007 and now stands at 120. As an international gateway for trade in the UK, the impact of foreign trucks on its roads is also a major concern here.

FTA's survey revealed that three in four hauliers "strongly agreed" and one in four agreed that "foreign lorries in Kent fill up on cheaper diesel and undercut local businesses".

Chapman said: "The number-one concern for Kent's hauliers is the price they are paying to fill up their tanks, but around 60 per cent of this cost goes straight into Treasury coffers."

"While this is helping fill the deficit gap on the one hand, it is also doing irreparable damage to an industry that simply can't compete in the face of cheaper foreign competition."

"The result is ultimately unemployment and insolvency, which is not good news for the UK's recovery."

"The results we have found in Kent are being played out across the whole of the UK – unless the Government takes action to review its fuel-duty policy, the situation will inevitably get much worse."

AT RISK: Two proposed fuel-duty rises will put increasing strain on Kent's haulage companies

Films help to ease charities through the pain of closure

LEGAL experts Vertex Law have assisted in the production of a series of online video tutorials giving advice, support and guidance to charities considering their future in the light of the economic climate.

The three-part series is aimed at assisting charities that are worried for their future and are considering winding up their organisations or combining their efforts with a similar organisation.

Topics covered in the clips, available on the National Council for Voluntary Organisations website and YouTube, include merging, the transfer of intellectual property rights and when to seek further legal advice.

Kate Mayor, commercial lawyer at Kings Hill-based Vertex Law, who is interviewed in the videos, said she hoped they would be of use to charities considering their future in an innovative way.

"We are increasingly encountering charities that are having their funding withdrawn and are fearing for their futures," she said. "Our advice is to not to bury your head in the sand. Recognising the problems early on is key to a successful merger and/or closure. Closure or winding up your charity need not be the dreadful event that it is often thought of, if it is faced up to and planned for in plenty of time."

The videos were filmed by blogger Sydney Thornbury, executive director of WebPlay, an arts-education charity that is itself in the process of winding up.

Thornbury said: "It seems like winding up is a big dirty secret that nobody wants to talk about and there is very little useful information readily available."

"With mergers and dissolutions increasingly becoming a concern to the sector, we realised that a series of video clips on the topic would be a handy resource for others to use and were delighted that Vertex Law, which has helped us immensely in recent years, were so keen to help."

Mayor added that the clips were a starting point for charities facing a difficult future.

She said: "The video clips are intended to provide initial tips and support to any charities that are considering merging or winding up. However, each charity's particular circumstances will be unique."

"For more information and advice they should contact our experienced commercial team, who will be happy to help."

Workshops to help leisure industry make the most of interns and young workers

TOURISM and hospitality bosses from across the county are being invited to find out what young workers can bring to their businesses at an event organised by Visit Kent this month.

Taking place at the Pegwell Bay Hotel, Ramsgate, on Monday, November 28, delegates at the event will hear about the value that interns, apprentices and volunteer graduates can bring to a business and how to go about taking them on.

Speakers include Nadia Lawes of Grads Kent, who will detail why internships are good for business.

Operated by Kent County Council, Grads Kent encourages companies in the county to recruit at graduate level and aims to make it easier for graduates to find work.

Lawes will be followed by Sarah Colclough, of Kent Apprenticeships, who will outline how to take on a hospitality apprentice.

"Kent's schools and colleges have a great track record in producing the county's tourism and hospitality workers of the future," said Kerstin Andrews, head of training at Visit Kent. "There is always a plentiful supply of keen and talented young workers and we need to make matching that pool of talent with the available jobs as easy as possible."

"With record levels of youth unemployment, it is even more important that our tourism and hospitality business-owners are aware of not only how easy it is to take on interns and apprentices but also that they appreciate what value those young people can add to their businesses."

"Nadia and Sarah's talks will be invaluable for anyone looking to recruit young, talented and enthusiastic employees but who are unsure how to take the next step."

Other speakers include Frank Thorley, founder and chairman of Thorley Taverns, and Charles Buchanan, of Manston airport. It runs all day, with Lawes's and Colclough's presentations during the afternoon session, which starts at 1.30pm.

Places are still available for any businesses that would like to attend. For more information, phone Farah Miri-Meziane on 07920 792319 or email farah.mirimeziane@kent.gov.uk for more information.

Longer placements will help firms grow

Firm cleans up with new exam

A TUNBRIDGE Wells firm has created a new qualification to help staff who are keen to get ahead in the cleaning industry.

Developed by Maid2Clean owner Darren Murray in conjunction with Professor Pat O'Mara from the British Institute of Cleaning Sciences, the MaidVersity exam is the only qualification targeted exclusively at domestic cleaning.

"We are really excited to be able to reward our career-minded staff with the opportunity to sit this exam," said Mr Murray.

"MaidVersity allows our staff to set goals, work hard to achieve them, and then receive the recognition they deserve.

"This new scheme will allow suitable candidates to progress to management or supervisor level, and we hope will also demonstrate to our clients how serious we are about taking care of their homes."

Mr Murray said that by studying an extensive handbook, candidates can complete the 90-question exam and be assessed almost instantly. He added: "Letting a cleaning company into your home is a big deal and a responsibility we take very seriously."

Studies pay off with NHS degree

A PRESENTATION was held to celebrate the success of staff at Medway Community Healthcare and NHS Medway who have recently completed a foundation degree.

Since September, 2009, the 11 students have attended university one afternoon a fortnight and dedicated at least six hours a week outside of work to study towards a foundation degree in health and social care business administration.

The exam, designed in response to requests by non-clinical staff, gives administrative staff the opportunity to develop new skills and gain a university entry-level qualification.

Sam Clark, organisational development facilitator at Medway Community Healthcare, said: "The foundation degree has supported staff to continue to build on their skills and progress in their careers.

"The presentation celebrated their success and rewarded all of the work and long hours they have each contributed."

EDUCATION leaders have called on the business community to offer more student work placements in Kent.

The appeal was made by representatives from the University of Greenwich and MidKent College at the latest TSP+ Forum, organised by Tunbridge Wells-based law firm Thomson Snell & Passmore.

Speaking at the event at Shorne Woods Country Park, near Gravesend, Professor Alan Reed – director of regional development at Greenwich – said year-long placements would give students a 'sandwich' approach to their degree studies.

He said: "There is often the complaint from businesses that they do not benefit from short-term work placements as the students take time to get up to speed. However, businesses that offer longer placements say they see a big difference in the individuals and get much more out of the process.

"Employing a student for a year also allows the company to have the undergraduate on a year-long probation; in effect taking a look at their suitability to the role before deciding whether to employ them.

"When these students graduate they are more employable as they are seen to be more 'business ready'."

MidKent College vice-principal Sue McLeod also spoke at the TSP+ Forum, telling delegates how the academic institution was working to add a business element into its variety of courses.

The college, which has campuses in Medway and Maidstone, has a 'work ready' focus in all its courses across a wide range of subjects and has increased the number of apprenticeships available through links with companies across the county.

Ms McLeod said: "We are increasingly looking to meet the needs of business. The key is to embed employability skills into flexible vocational degrees, which means offering programmes that have been written jointly with industry and including work-based assessments.

"We are keen to forge more partnerships with business to provide meaningful work placements."

Nick Horton – head of dispute resolution at Thomson Snell & Passmore – added: "Despite the downturn, one of the challenges facing businesses in Kent and Medway remains recruitment, particularly of highly skilled workers. Therefore any initiative that brings higher and further education providers, their students and businesses across the county together is to be congratulated.

"Linking such competent graduates with Kent businesses will undoubtedly help to add value to the county and retain skilled workers."

DIY disasters saved by new wood venture

A BESPOKE carpentry firm has launched the South East's first dedicated woodworking school.

The Woodwork School, which is the brainchild of Hythe-based Listed Joinery, offers training for all abilities and age groups across a broad range of carpentry, joinery and DIY disciplines.

Courses are available over a variety of durations, from three days and five days to a full 10-week evening class.

Managing director and school principal David Smith said the venture was taking a fresh approach compared to conventional carpentry courses, providing a syllabus that will give content-rich, practical lessons aimed at improving the skills of keen woodworking enthusiasts, as well as empowering home owners to undertake significant projects that would otherwise incur hefty costs from tradesmen.

He added: "In recent years we have been repeatedly asked by our carpentry and renovation clients if short, practical courses existed where they could get a flavour for our trade, or could help them take on projects such as hanging doors.

"So we put together a wide-ranging package of practical lessons which would enable individuals of all abilities to feel confident in undertaking projects of their own or, indeed, to change careers.

"We feel this is a great time to be launching the first specialist school in the South East. Everyone is suffering in the recession and we're able to help individuals save a considerable amount of time, money and hassle, as well as having the privilege of imparting some of the trade secrets and knowledge gathered over the last 30 years."

Lauretta Winstanley, from CITB Construction Skills (the sector skills council for the industry), said: "In my opinion the benefits of the school are immense, in terms of encouraging life-long learning and empowering individuals to embrace the challenge of adopting new skills."

Nuffield Foundation cash boost to enable science students' progress

SCIENCE students can receive a bursary from the Nuffield Foundation to carry out research projects at the University of Greenwich at Medway next summer.

This year nine students from schools in Medway, Maidstone and Tonbridge were each awarded £80 per week for four to six weeks, to experiment with polymers and proteins in the School of Science.

Dr Nichola Coleman, who co-ordinated the projects, said:

"The Nuffield students who were with us were outstanding. We were very impressed by the quality of their research and we welcome future applications from our local schools."

The Nuffield Foundation also provided Andrew Hurt, a second year chemistry student at the University of Greenwich, with an undergraduate bursary to carry out research on nanoparticles for tissue engineering.

He said: "During my project I learned that certain materials can stimulate the body's ability to repair its own bone tissue. These are biodegradable so they leave the body after they have begun their work.

"I've now begun to develop a scaffold for bone tissue cells to grow and hope to continue this research for a PhD."

Teachers can find out more details about next year's scheme by emailing Dr Coleman at n.coleman@gre.ac.uk.

Sorry, not suitable for children.

How many slides can you take in one show?

HOW many times have we all sat through a Powerpoint presentation, twiddling our thumbs and looking for the nearest exit?

Well, now inventive comedian Dave Gorman is looking to turn the tables with his aptly-named new stand-up tour, Dave Gorman's Powerpoint Presentation.

The 40-year-old is well known for creating original shows like his box-office smash Googlewhack Adventure and the televised Are You Dave Gorman? in which he took a wager against his friend to find other people sharing his name.

But surely a Powerpoint presentation is going too far?

Gorman is keen to put us right: "It is not about any one thing and it is not about Powerpoint. It actually is a Powerpoint presentation."

"It is not a parody of a business presentation – a lot of people assume it is going to be that. I have never seen a business presentation. I have never sat through one."

"One of the things I am told is if you are building a Powerpoint presentation for your workplace, you must never put more than 30 slides in it. More than 30 slides is death by Powerpoint presentation."

"In my show I use 850, so it is very different, very fast-paced – I'm throwing a lot of information at you. All of it is there for a reason – no one needs to do any homework or take any notes, it is kind of like a double act where me and the screen are talking at the same time."

Gorman's gig at the Tunbridge Wells Assembly Hall Theatre on Wednesday is part of a tour that started with 28 sold-out shows at this year's Edinburgh Fringe Comedy Festival.

His pedigree as a stand-up stretches across the globe and includes a three-month run on Broadway in New York, shows at the Sydney Opera House and being awarded the HBO One Man Show Award in the US in 2001 and 2004.

And in the UK, Gorman is also a best-seller with his books, which coincide with each of his live shows. His Googlewhack adventure topped the Sunday Times non-fiction list in 2004.

But his new show is to remain live – and live only.

He said: "The last time I toured, I did the old one-man-and-a-mic-style stand-up and in the final third of the show I would reveal the screen and add a Powerpoint thing at the end. Every time I did this, it would get this massive cheer and it was like having pudding at the end of a meal.

6699

It is a kind of double act where me and the screen are talking at the same time

DAVE GORMAN, ON HIS LATEST SHOW

"And every time I thought of new material, I knew how I would make it better using a visual element or analysis through Powerpoint. I couldn't stop my head going that way."

"This could never be on TV or DVD – we could never record it for legal reasons. If you are going to forensically analyse adverts and magazine articles, you can get away with it live, but if you release it, the people who made them will sue you."

Gorman has had his fingers in many comedy pies, winning two BAFTA Awards as a writer on The Mrs Merton Show (BBC

One), as well as making appearances on The Late Show With David Letterman (CBS), Absolutely Fabulous (BBC One), Never Mind The Buzzcocks (BBC Two) and acting in Steve Coogan's film 24 Hour Party People.

But the funnyman is always keen to keep the subjects of his new shows a secret for future audiences.

He said: "I don't want to ruin anything. If you saw a comedian last night and told me that he did a show about crocodiles and kettles, I don't know if I would want to see a show about that – knowing what the topics are doesn't make it funny."

"But I will give you a flavour. For example, if you want to talk about an advert and point out why it doesn't make sense, you can talk about an advert that we all already know like the Go Compare one, but everyone knows that is annoying."

"So if I want to show you an advert where I have noticed something but you may not have, I can show you it in five-second clips, stop, analyse it and reveal something. It's very useful."

Gorman, who may take his new show overseas, is also occupying a popular slot on Absolute Radio, something he treasures.

He said: "I love doing it. It's a very interactive show – there is enjoyable conversation and the childish thrill of being a teenager, taking our friends to our bedroom and listening to our music."

"I like it so much that I am doing a tour show in Dublin next Saturday night and flying back so I can get in and do the radio show on the Sunday morning!"

■ Dave Gorman's Powerpoint Presentation plays at the Assembly Hall Theatre in Tunbridge Wells at 8pm on Wednesday, November 16. Phone 01892 530613 or visit www.assemblyhalltheatre.co.uk for tickets.

Meet the landlord who accepts only the best

THE First & Last public house in Herne Common has become a popular destination for Kent's punters as a new owner looks to bring the good times back to the establishment.

Experienced publican David Sullivan has been in charge at the historic watering hole for the past six months and is looking to make another success of his latest venture.

The 43-year-old said: "I was born in a pub – this is what I do. I grew up in pubs. My mum and dad got out of the pub game and moved into a flat when I was about 14. Three months later, I moved out. I couldn't hack it – I had only ever lived in pubs and there was just no noise in the flat. So I moved back into the pub with my nan and grandad and I have been in pubs ever since."

And with five generations and more than 200 years behind him, Sullivan knows what makes a good pub.

He said: "The last pub I had was in Barnet high street called The King's Head. It wasn't a very nice place, so I got in there, turned it around and went on my way."

"I have been here for six months now and in my opinion this place was a bit of a dead duck."

"The pub is now clean, the atmosphere is right, there is new furniture and a bit of upholstery and I have put fresh food back in. There is nothing frozen other than the ice cream."

"The locals have their pub back and I just want to let other people find out about us."

And David already knows the area well: "My grandparents had a house just down the road in Beltinge for 40 years, so I grew up between here and London. I used to come in here as a kid."

The philosophy behind the First & Last is to create a welcoming atmosphere and a quality menu, something the new landlord believes is already under way.

He said: "The pub has always been known for its good food because it has always been the same chef, Martyn Beer."

"Martyn sets the menus – whatever he wants to cook is what comes out of the kitchen. I don't interfere with the food at all. The menus change when he wants to."

"The chef's knowledge of food and different cuisines has to be used. It's good having your steak-and-ale pies, but things like the Burmese curry you won't see in many other pubs."

David is keen to make sure the good standard of meals is maintained and continues to improve their reputation.

He said: "At least 90 per cent of my produce is local. The vegetables because we are obviously in the middle of Kent, and I was using a local butcher's shop for a while, but the quality of the meat went down, so I stopped. I am very fussy. I want the best. It has to be proper quality at a good price."

The eatery is complete with two stove fires, traditional beams and Kentish ales adding to the warm and cosy feel.

There is also a function room for big parties.

He said: "We average around 90 covers on a Sunday afternoon, which is a lot of food."

"We have 12 permanent staff who are very good. This is the first time I have taken a pub on and not had to make changes to personnel."

"The food, that is what the pub is known for, and the chef, he is brilliant. I hope to make it into a pub that when people drive past they think 'Let's go in there'."

"It's the little changes, and people are starting to notice."

However, the little chap is already exploring his enclosure and Corumba has taken to motherhood very well."

Brazilian tapirs are born after a gestation period of 13 months and are found in the jungles and wooded swamps of Brazil, Colombia, Venezuela and Paraguay as they are essentially forest-dwellers.

Riot of comedy Finest acts will rock the Wells

Trinity Theatre, Tunbridge Wells
Friday, November 25, 8pm
01892 678678

THE new Blind Pig's Comedy Trot Out starts at the Trinity Theatre in Tunbridge Wells later this month. The show offers a mix of comedy, sketches and stand-up routines.

The opening show will feature some of our top comedic talent, including Brett Goldstein, McNeill and Pamphillon, Gary Tro, Kate Lucas and local comedian Elinor Lawless. The show will be compered by MC Garrett Millerick. The Blind Pig's Comedy Trot Out is the brainchild of local actor Peter Basham. Having spent many happy evenings accompanying his wife Elinor Lawless to gigs around London, he had the idea of bringing some of the best acts he had seen to Tunbridge Wells. The man who left the Titanic A tough call?

Memorial Theatre, Broadstairs
Sunday, November 20, 7pm
0845 2626263

ON April 15, 1912, the Titanic, the greatest ship in the world, slipped below the frigid waters of the Atlantic on her maiden voyage. Yet Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star Line, stepped into a lifeboat and sailed away from the disaster. This new show, The Man Who Left The Titanic, evokes that terrible voyage and asks whether Bruce Ismay only did what any of us might have done in the same circumstances – or should his actions that night consign his name to infamy? Was he a coward, or merely human? Tickets are £10.50 for Sarah Thorne Theatre Club members, and £12.50 for non-members.

WINNER of 19 major awards, An Inspector Calls arrives at The Churchill in Bromley this month.

The National Theatre production of this renowned allegorical tale will bring the critically-acclaimed show from Oscar-winning director Stephen Daldry that offers an evening of compelling drama packed with suspense. When Inspector Goole arrives unexpectedly at the prosperous Birling family home in Brumley, a peaceful dinner party is shattered by his investigations into the death of a young woman. His startling revelations shake the foundations of their lives and challenge us all to examine our consciences. Written in 1944 by the playwright JB Priestley, An Inspector Calls premiered in the West End in 1945.

THE Sensational 60s Show is a new production for 2011 and heads to Folkestone next week. A fantastic array of original hits is performed by four of the most popular bands of the 60s, The Tremeloes, Herman's Hermits, The Union Gapuk and The Dreamers.

This quintessential 60s line-up is packed with nostalgia, with more than 25 hits such as Silence Is Golden, Twist And Shout, Here Comes My Baby, Do You Love Me, Helule Helule, Even The Bad Times Are Good and Angel Of The Morning. These groups were some of the most influential of their time, so you can relive an evening true to the 60s... when pop music was at its best (maybe).

The musical is set in New York in 2030 and the undead are among us and more alive than ever, especially inside the club Live And Let Die, where aspiring singer Pandora arrives to audition for the resident vocalist position. Subdued feeling to market despite slight rise in values

THE latest house price index from Nationwide building society has revealed that prices rose by 0.4 per cent in October on a monthly basis.

On an annual basis, house prices are now 0.8 per cent higher than this time last year – representing the first yearly rise in six months – with the average UK home costing £165,650.

However, when comparing prices in the three months to the end of October with the previous quarter – which is a more reliable indicator – prices fell by 0.2 per cent.

According to Nationwide, today's figures suggest the housing market is still "treading water".

Nationwide chief economist Robert Gardner said: "The outlook remains uncertain, but with the UK economic recovery expected to remain sluggish, house-price growth is likely to remain soft in the period ahead, with prices moving sideways or drifting modestly lower over the next 12 months."

In other housing-market news this week, property website Hometrack said weak demand drove house prices down 0.2 per cent last month and warned of a downward trend in house prices in the coming months.

Also this week, the Bank of England revealed that mortgage approvals fell in September for the first time in six months.

According to the Bank, there were 50,967 loans approved in the month – down 3 per cent on August's figure.

However, September's figure was broadly in line with forecasts and suggests the UK mortgage market will remain subdued for some time to come.

Approvals still remain well below the levels seen prior to the financial crisis.

Since the early 1990s, mortgage approvals have averaged about 90,000 a month, but the credit crunch saw a tightening of lending criteria and many have been unable to secure a mortgage unless they have a significant deposit.

HOMEVALUES

In this third part of his series, Martin Cunningham MNAEA, commercial director of Archant's property portal, homes24.co.uk, introduces another useful new function built into homes24, now powered by Zoopla

HOMEVALUES is a free tool that enables users to get an online estimate of value for any UK residential property.

HomeValues provides home-value estimates by crunching sold-house price data from the Land Registry and marketed property values.

Homeowners can claim their properties and add and/or refine the information held; this increases the confidence of the estimated value.

Behind HomeValues lies a unique and powerful algorithm, and if you're a homeowner wanting to weigh up whether to move or to make home improvements you have the ability to feed in your project costs and see the impact on the property's estimated value.

To be clear, HomeValues is not a replacement for an estate agent in working out the value of your home, as a good local agent will have knowledge of any other matters that may influence the potential value of the property.

HomeValues is, however, a great way to gain an idea of your home's price performance against the rest of the market.

You can try HomeValues for yourself for free by visiting the site at <http://bit.ly/h24homevalues>.

*Until next week...
Martin*

REVAMPED:
The new Mazda3 is better than ever, not only looking good but offering a better drive, too

Mazda3 facelift beauty is more than skin-deep

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THOUGH Mazda is happily using the term 'facelift' to describe the revamp of the Mazda3, it is perhaps a rare example of a carmaker under-playing its hand.

For the operation here has been more than the simple cosmetic exercise of tweaking the front grille and aerodynamics to extract additional fuel savings.

The big changes are hidden away and only become clear on the road, where what was already one of the best driver's cars in the family hatchback sector is now even better. This has been achieved, says Mazda, by revising underfloor reinforcement to boost rigidity, stability and composure and cut road noise.

The dampers have also been tweaked to better handle increasingly poor road surfaces, benefiting both comfort and driving precision – the last also being helped by some fettling of the steering system.

Combined, this makes the Mazda3 feel like a car from the class above. Indeed, the market perception for some time has been that despite keen pricing – the revised car goes on sale in early 2012 priced from £14,995 – the Mazda occupies a more premium slot slightly above mainstream brands, though sitting below the VW Golf.

However, Mazda execs at the launch event couldn't resist pointing out that they recently took No 1 in the German JD Power customer-satisfaction survey – a home defeat for the Golf.

And this perception can only get better as the Japanese marque pays more attention to cabin fixtures and fittings: facelift interior cosmetics include a higher-quality dashboard with easier visibility and order to match the strides taken by some rivals, notably Peugeot and Vauxhall.

But the brand that revels in its image as Japan's sporting brand has also extracted more from the new-look Mazda3's powertrains and added an all-new and more sensible 1.6-litre petrol auto model – replacing a thirsty 2.0-litre. The pick continues to be the 1.6-litre diesel, though. A lightweight unit with 115PS/113bhp on tap, it blends decent performance with excellent economy and tax efficiency and has a smooth six-speed gearbox.

It makes it harder to argue a case for the flagship 2.2-litre diesel – in 185PS or 150PS – which feels heavier and less flexible, though its ability to cruise the motorway with ease and good economy will entice high-mileage users.

Lancia's back but has changed to Chrysler's name

IN a marriage of convenience, Lancia has returned to the UK partnered with a Chrysler badge.

The match suits both parties: the Lancia name was tarnished by adverse publicity in the UK about rust problems in the late 1970s, while restructured Chrysler badly needed small-car offerings in a post-recession market.

And Italy's Fiat group now runs both brands – it took a controlling interest in Chrysler two years ago – and was matchmaker here.

For now, the new Chrysler (Lancia) line-up comprises the Ypsilon supermini (from £10,695 and pictured) and Delta family hatchback (from £16,695), with the latter reviving a famous Lancia name – the Delta Integrale is regarded as one of the greatest-ever rally cars.

Despite distinctive looks – and they won't be to everyone's taste – both cars are Fiat derivatives: the Ypsilon is based on Fiat's big-selling 500, while the Delta is an expanded version of the under-rated Bravo family hatch.

However, both cars are being pitched upmarket yet aggressively priced; Lancia has always been seen as an innovative, more premium and stylish brand against Fiat, and this also fits Chrysler's traditional position versus other brands in the old US-owned namesake group.

Apart from being well-laden with kit, both cars are being marketed with lots of customising options – an attraction likely to work well for the Ypsilon, which finds itself up against other distinctive small cars that offer the same, such as the 500 itself and BMW Mini.

Another big selling point for the Ypsilon is the availability of Fiat's clever 85bhp TwinAir engine – an eco-friendly turbocharged twin-cylinder petrol unit that can be both frugal and sporty and offers road-tax-beating low emissions of CO₂.

Honda's hot new hybrid makes its sporting point

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HONDA has a tradition of producing one-off sports cars. The nearest to a sequence was two generations of CR-X models, though they couldn't have been more different.

The first (1984-1992) was a slick 2+2 fastback that bucked the trend for hot-hatches, but this gave way to a strict two-seater open-top (1992-97). It was a great drive, too, but ridiculously impractical.

Far from founding a sporting dynasty, though, it was two years before the Japanese marque launched a new sportster and it was all-change again; the S2000 (1999-2009) was what many would call 'a proper sports car' with rear-wheel drive chassis, long bonnet/cropped tail, peppy engine and folding soft-top.

It paid homage to classic British roadsters as Mazda's MX-5 still does. Unlike the Mazda, though, early S2000s erred towards the tail-happy handling of those old Brits but compensated with an engine that revved like a Honda motorbike – this gorgeous-looking roadster is a future classic.

And now to the latest twist in the Honda sports-car story, the CR-Z (from £17,695). Arriving in 2010, it looks most like the original CR-X, having a stylish low-slung 2+2 fastback body – it even has a similar split-glass tailgate – but any discernable lineage ends there, for this is an eco-friendly petrol-electric hybrid, albeit one with a manual gearbox, unique on the hybrid market at present.

So what's the point? If you like a sporty drive, why would you want a hybrid?

Yes, the CR-Z is a rolling contradiction, but it articulates a thought I always have when road-testing a fast car: how many negatives about the car must you endure all of the time so that you can enjoy rare occasions when you can indulge its sportiness?

GREEN AND SPORTY:

Honda's new hybrid sports car may seem like an odd choice, but it certainly fights its own corner for speed and efficiency

Admittedly, the CR-Z is no sprinter. It takes about 10 seconds to hit 60mph, but a Mini Cooper takes a second less while a Cooper S knocks three seconds off.

However, if you want a Mini as green as the CR-Z, then you need the Mini diesel, which has inferior performance and doesn't look like a sports coupe even if the cabin size is better than the Honda.

And the CR-Z certainly handles well for an eco machine. It's based on Honda's staid Ford Focus-class hybrid, the Insight, but company engineers have checked their racing notebook and tweaked the chassis to fit the parameters I sketched earlier: it's comfortable and easy-going 90 per cent of the time and delivers the required edge when you want it.

Perversely, the CR-Z also turns the hybrid ethos on its head because the 14bhp electric motor that's there to eke out the fuel consumption of the 112bhp 1.5-litre petrol engine also acts like an instant turbocharger when you put your foot down.

Helpfully, Honda has also provided three driver 'mood' settings: Eco means what it says so the accelerator feels like it has been disconnected, but you will save fuel – as the typically busy Honda dashboard will let you know.

Normal does what it says on the tin, and Sport unleashes what beast there can be contained within what is intentionally an eco sports car.

The key to ultimate happiness, though, is the sporty and light six-speed gearbox; maybe not every buyer of a hybrid wants an automatic?

Simon Lacey, sales manager at Barretts Honda of Canterbury, told us: "The CR-Z appeals across the spectrum, to those who want a hybrid and those who like sports cars.

"And yes, that electric motor also offers a stack more torque [pulling power] when you want rapid acceleration. Driving a CR-Z always puts a smile on my face."

Fastest-ever on-road Astra

VAUXHALL has unveiled the Astra VXR, due in early 2012.

Based on the newly-launched Astra GTC three-door coupe hatchback, it will be one of the most powerful cars in its class and the fastest-ever production Astra. Power comes from a 2.0-litre turbo petrol engine, with a mechanical limited slip differential to control the 280bhp output to the front wheels.

VW launches stylish CC 2G

VOLKSWAGEN will replace the current Passat CC with another stylish vision of four-door coupe style, arriving in the UK next March.

This time, though, the German car giant has decided not to burden such an eye-catching car with the same name as its rather staid Passat family saloon/estate car range – it will be known simply as the Volkswagen CC.

Chevy begins festive cuts

CHEVROLET has declared a Christmas sale early – through November, buyers can save up to £6,000 in the American brand's Bargain Bonanza.

There are price cuts on the Spark city car (1.0+ model £6,875), Cruze family hatch/saloon and seven-seat Captiva SUV (pictured). Biggest savings are on the high-spec Captiva 2.2 VCDi LT – £21,695.

Ford picking up on new pick-up buyers

MOTOR manufacturers now recognise that not every buyer of a pick-up truck has a lumberjack shirt and a builder's bum.

Four-door-cab Nissan Navaras and Mitsubishi L200s – aka Warriors and Animals – became hits with private buyers who wanted 4x4 and something different, and VW upped the ante recently with the classy Amarok.

And now Ford has raised the stakes with an all-new Ranger, which claims to offer superior driving dynamics and has become the first-ever pick-up to receive the maximum five-star Euro NCAP safety rating, performing well on adult and child passenger as well as pedestrian protection.

Driver appeal comes from a stiffer frame and tuned suspension to reduce body roll, allied with new front and rear suspension. A new steering system delivers more precision, easier parking and low-speed manoeuvring, while Ford says the new Ranger (priced from £15,515 excluding VAT) is one of the most comfortable and quietest pick-ups, due to intensive work to cut wind and road noise.

The vehicle's design chief John Tatge said: "For traditional pick-up buyers, the benefits are huge, with no compromises in payload capacity or towing ability.

"For customers coming from other segments who expect smoother, more refined road handling, the all-new Ranger delivers, with less of the harshness typically found."

Zafira to hand fun back to drivers

NOT so long ago, the concept 'sporty MPV' was a contradiction in terms.

These people-carriers then majored on capacity and visibility from a cabin mounted higher than the average car – not taut handling.

But the penny dropped eventually that not all MPV-buyers wanted to sacrifice driver enjoyment for the sake of those two benefits.

Ford countered with the Ford C-Max and S-Max, Seat launched its Altea series and Vauxhall's second-generation Zafira was more dynamic – and the General Motors brand has now gone a stage further with a second and more upmarket version.

Shown as the Zafira Tourer concept at this year's Geneva Motor Show, it arrives here before the end of the year, priced from £21,000 (diesels from £22,265) up to £28,465.

It will be marketed above the current Zafira, which is nearing the end of its production life, so we wait to see where its replacement will sit relative to a new big brother based on Vauxhall's big Insignia family-car model.

Styling-wise, the new Tourer is another triumph from Vauxhall-Opel's British design chief Mark Adams and his team, with rakish lines to match its claims as a driver's MPV.

But it still carries the seven-seat foldaway flexibility summed up by Vauxhall's now-familiar Flex-7 branding and, this time, all three second-row seats are individual and allow for movement to give extra room to those in the third and final row.

Safety is another major credential for a car designed to carry more people; Traffic Sign Recognition, Side Blind Spot Alert and Advance Park Assist – which helps drivers find an adequate parking space and guides them in to it – are among options. There are also two new powertrains – a 1.4 Turbo petrol and 2.0 CDTi diesel (in three outputs).

And Vauxhall claims "limousine-like quality and space" inside, but it is the aggressive pricing that will attract buyers particularly, especially as the lead-in figure is £1,200 less than its key rival, the Ford S-Max.

Main Dealer Servicing

Do you really save by skimping on servicing?

IT'S tempting to cut corners financially during tough economic times like now.

No wonder, then, that some car-owners skimp on servicing, stretch the service schedule or even ignore booking their car in for its regular once-over at the garage.

But it's a false economy. After buying a house, buying a car is usually the second biggest investment we make and should be protected by ensuring that the service schedule is kept up to date and repairs are carried out promptly and competently.

Not so long ago, the best guarantee here was a full main-dealer service history, a reassuring record that everything required of the car and the manufacturer's warranty had been carried out.

But this became seen as a restrictive practice by the European Union, which brought in legislation in 2002 that made it illegal for car-manufacturers to insist on their cars being maintained solely by their franchise network to keep the guarantee intact.

It also meant that manufacturers had to make vehicle-diagnostics information – crucial with increasingly sophisticated vehicles – specialist tools and updates available to independent garages and servicing centres.

So why do so many car-buyers continue to use main-dealer franchising when an independent outlet is now allowed to do the work and stamp the service book?

An obvious answer is that many car-buyers, having parted with thousands of pounds on a shiny new motor, still believe it is the best way to preserve their investment. Read this supplement to find out why.

Dealers say 'me too' to quick-fit centres

PRICING: Vauxhall MasterFit dealers are playing quick-fit centres at their own game by offering competitive deals on consumables such as tyres

MAIN dealers have hit back at the quick-fit/fast-fit brigade as drivers shop around for the best deals on motoring extras.

Such fast turnaround chains blossomed as drivers aimed to keep control of their motoring budgets by saving on the biggest motoring 'consumables' such as exhausts, tyres, batteries, clutches, shock-absorbers and routine services, plus the annual MOT.

But main dealers have reckoned that if car-owners are still using their service bays, then they won't mind considering realistic deals on tyres, batteries and exhausts, for instance, to ensure a time-saving one-stop shop purchase.

Using the main dealer also guarantees that only genuine manufacturers' parts are used, bringing the confidence of additional quality and reliability.

And that same guarantee, plus realistic pricing, has encouraged having bodyshop repairs done either by the franchise's own panel-beaters and paintshop or one that gets its seal of approval.

Main dealers have also borrowed from their quick-fit rivals by offering menu pricing; this means that, like dining out, a customer can decide what he wants and knows in advance what it will cost – avoiding any motoring indignation when the bill is presented.

Some dealers will even let you spread the cost via finance or servicing schemes covering several years.

Others may offer a loyalty scheme to keep

BE PREPARED: A Seat Alhambra MPV faces the winter driving challenge – Seat dealers are among those supporting industry-body Tyresafe's campaign to awaken drivers to the benefits of winter tyres owners of older models on their books rather than see them defect to the non-franchised sector, because those owners believe that the lower value of their car does not warrant the higher perceived cost of main-dealer servicing.

Another trick borrowed from the quick-fit sector is longer working hours at main-dealer service centres; dealers are much more aware that many customers want to drop off their car early on their way to work and then pick it up at the end of the day – a courtesy car may even be offered.

Bookings can often be made centrally, too, so that customers living midway between two franchised dealers within the same group can pick the most convenient service slots available.

Car-care best practice – our top tips

YOU can't argue that driving a modern car is a much more forgiving and comfortable experience than it was just a few years ago.

The downside, though, is that much less can be done by the DIY mechanic; keeping the car in reliable, correct and safe condition is now more of a job for the professional and, of course, it costs.

Unfortunately, this means owners often ignore problems for too long and servicing is stretched beyond the recommended parameters, which also endangers the warranty and the provenance of the vehicle when you come to sell.

So, the golden rules are:

- Maintain the service record to the letter. Get it serviced at the correct mileages or annually and make sure the servicing book goes with the car to the service and can be easily found and is properly stamped up, although some motor marques are switching to centralised digital records so a car's servicing record is always available if required.

- Read the warranty document thoroughly to ensure there are no possible pitfalls that could endanger the guarantee.

- Make sure you act on any recalls from the manufacturer for checks or replacements, even if they do not relate specifically to safety – it will help maintain the warranty and future saleability of the car.

- Don't rely on the MOT as insurance of the car's safety and reliability, even if it has just passed with flying colours – problems can arise at any time and you should get them checked as soon as possible.

YOU AND YOUR CAR: Look after yourself, too. Main dealerships like this Lexus centre, left, are pleasant places to be while you wait to collect your car. The Skoda Superb Estate, right – the Czech brand continues to win customer-service awards for its models and the support of an enthusiastic dealer network

- Check lights regularly for safety and legality. Get used to 'lighting up' in the garage or when you are nosed in or backed up to a wall.

- Check tyres – including the spare – monthly, and that includes the correct pressures as listed in the handbook or the sticker often placed on the driver's side-door frame. Though the legal tread-depth is 1.6mm, most motoring authorities advise replacement at 2mm, especially in winter when icy and wet conditions can compromise grip.

- Keep oil, windscreen-washer, coolant, power-steering, clutch and brake fluid levels topped up without over-filling, and make those checks on level ground. Don't wait for warning lights to come on – it could be too late to stop damage or compromise safety. Some cars have an interim set of warning lights, but these can be an unwelcome reminder if you are in the middle of a long journey at the weekend and miles from a decent garage. Don't be caught out.

- Replace wiper blades. There is little point in keeping the washer topped up if the blades are worn or split. But if the windscreen is covered with bugs and grease, don't expect the washer and wipers to do the job for you – use a spray and some elbow grease.

- Shop around for servicing. Even if you are committed to main-dealer servicing, it does not mean you have to go back to the one where you bought the car – some are better on pricing and customer service than others.

THE BEST: Sophisticated cars like the luxurious Range Rover or Volvo's new executive star, the S60, need well-trained technicians to look after them

Hi-tech cars call for higher-spec technicians

INCREASINGLY complex vehicles and a shortage of skills in the jobs market has made the main-dealer technician a hugely important part of a main-dealer operation.

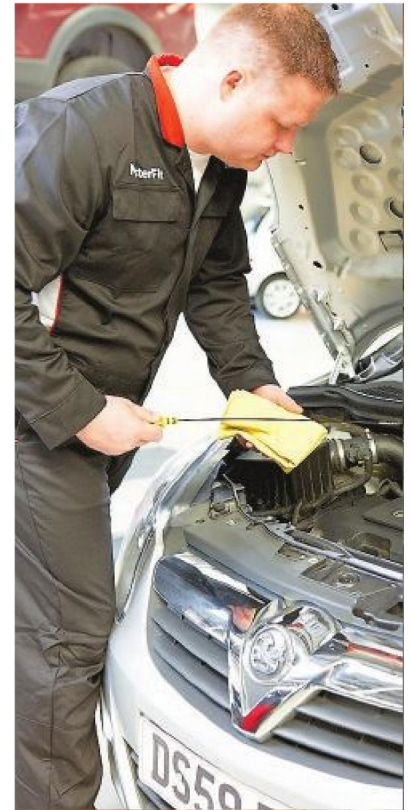

Sarah Sillars, executive chair of the trade's Institute of the Motor Industry (IMI), said: "The rate of technological change in the automotive industry is being driven by competition, consumer demands and regulation. This is creating a constant requirement for businesses to anticipate change and invest in training to help staff keep pace with developments."

The body has also developed a Consumer Code Of Practice system to promote and maintain professional standards, while its sister organisation, the Society Of Motor Manufacturers And Traders (SMMT) has published a paper, Strengthening Skills For A Growing Economy, that calls on the Government to help feed the demand for the necessary skill sets and ease unemployment at the same time.

Most motor-manufacturers are highly proactive in finding and promoting technicians within dealership networks – many will be sent to special sites and plants run by the companies in the UK and abroad to test their skills and attain the highest qualifications.

Fix your servicing costs for peace of mind

ONE of the best weapons picked up by main dealers has been the fixed-price service plan.

Initially, it was a trick tried by premium brands whose service costs were perceived as too pricey and taking advantage of an owner's natural reluctance to jeopardise the future value of the car by servicing outside the dealer network.

But it has been increasingly successful for more mainstream brands as they battle a burgeoning independent and quick-fit sector, only too happy to siphon off the steady churn of servicing work.

The plans are also flexible. Initially, they were to cover the car's warranty period – transferable in the event of the car's sale – or on an annual basis, but many brands have followed up with monthly instalment options, recognising that many drivers like to break down their

DEAL: Buy a new Alfa Romeo Giulietta and get five years/50,000 miles' free servicing thrown in motoring budget into more manageable chunks of money.

Premium brand Jaguar, for instance, offers a servicing plan for less than £28 a month, but the trend has divided still further, with some brands launching schemes for low-mileage drivers who, quite rightly, don't feel they are covering enough distance to justify the same charges faced by those covering average or starship mileages.

Fiat, for instance, has launched the FEEL3 range of plans for motorists who cover less than the average annual mileage of about 10,000 miles per year.

Topping this is sister brand Alfa Romeo's proposition to private-car-buyers: buy one of the sporting marque's MiTo supermini or Giulietta family hatchback models new and get five years'/50,000 miles' free servicing (whichever comes sooner).

CHOICE: Fiat has freed up service options for lower-mileage drivers of popular models like the 500

Best advice is to ask your main dealer about the menu of schemes available and get advice on the pros and cons of each one. The blurbs for such schemes use the word 'policy' a lot, for that is virtually what they are: insurance policies for servicing and the vehicle warranty – a cost-effective but necessary part of the month-by-month/annual cost of running a car.

QUALITY: Jaguar offers affordable monthly service plans on desirable cars like this XFR

Quality needs to shine

VEHICLE-BODY repairs used to be a minefield for everyone – even motor-dealers.

Pricing each job relied on rule-of-thumb expertise in the bodyshop and what unforeseen damage was beneath the visible impact damage.

Fortunately, new visual and digital analysis systems have come into play over the past 15 years and created a level playing field to reassure drivers, dealers and insurers.

It has also led to networks of approved bodyshops, which customer and trade alike are happy to trust with what can be expensive work requiring a guarantee of quality.

Not surprisingly, with the customer-satisfaction stakes so high, many dealers run their own shops or have close ties with an insurance-company approved site.

And while the damage-assessment work has become easier and more controlled, other factors have come in to play requiring quality and good practice to be maintained and improved.

One of these is the use of new paint technology, which has extended the palettes available to manufacturers – new metallics and pearlescent finish paints are increasingly popular – and also improved health and safety for those working in bodyshops.

In addition, in the quest to save weight and make cars more eco-friendly, many manufacturers are building aluminium and composite materials into their cars now, again changing the way bodyshops work.

No wonder, then, that customers, the motor trade and insurers are preferring to rely on experienced bodyshop experts.

Dealer service history – is it worth it?

It takes time to familiarise yourself with the jargon of the used-car classified ads, but the importance of DSH, MDSH and FMDSH soon becomes clear.

For those yet to be initiated, they are all variations on the theme 'dealer service history' with FMDSH being the gold standard – full main-dealer service history.

Does it matter? Well, a lot of new-car-buyers think it does in order to protect the future part-exchange or secondhand-sales value of their motor, since used-car-buyers will usually pay a premium for a complete and unblemished main-dealer service history.

The counter-argument, of course, is 'Ah, but you wiped out that perceived premium by paying more for your servicing via a main dealer while you owned the car'.

It's a point, but dealers have seen sales profits squeezed ever more tightly since the recession and have chosen to market their servicing arms more aggressively.

They've become more cost-effective, enhanced customer service, introduced competitive pricing on items like tyres – normally the preserve of the quick-fit centres – and played to the perception that only a main dealer's service technicians can know its cars as well they do.

And dealers know that happy service customers keep coming back, bringing immediate revenue but also seeing the latest new car models on the showroom floor – one day soon, they may buy again.

VALUE:
From left: Maintaining your Citroën C3 Picasso through your local franchise could mean it's worth more when you sell; VW technicians at work – ramping up the values of these Golf hatchbacks?

Third-party sources also support the wisdom of keeping your new car in the franchise family.

Media motoring guru Honest John gave this answer to a BMW-owner who considered using an independent garage to maintain his car:

"After independent servicing, you will get a lower part-ex price from a BMW-dealer and it will go to auction. If the car has a full dealer service history and is in retail condition, you will get a higher price.

"The difference will normally be worth more than you save on maintenance."

On the same theme, the website Motor Trade Insider polled a number of professional motor traders who collectively buy 5,000 cars per year for main dealers representing franchises such as Jaguar, BMW, Ford, VW and Mercedes:

"We asked a simple question: if you were asked to bid on a three-year-old variant of one of your models with average mileage and spec, would you value it any less if it had three KwikFit/Halfords/Tesco etc stamps against three stamps from the franchise represented by the car?

"The results in some cases were staggering: the Ford- and VW-buyers said they would value a car like this between £800-£1,000 less.

"The Jaguar-buyer said it would need to be £1,500 to £2,000 less and, amazingly, the BMW and Mercedes boys said they probably just wouldn't want to buy it."

Warring car-makers battle it out on the warranty front

NEW cars are covered by a warranty. For years, the standard was three years and/or 60,000 miles, but a recent outbreak of 'warranty wars' between car-makers has seen both the years and mileages increase. It's a good reason for car-buyers to shop around, but some of the new deals also reinforce the old adage to check the small print.

This will confirm exactly what the manufacturer will and will not pay for if the car breaks down within the agreed time period or mileage. And this makes it imperative that the car-owner also sticks to the rules by keeping the car serviced according to the warranty and also taking note of and acting on any recall notices for unforeseen faults and problems.

Some marques are more lenient about late servicing than others, but a common pitfall is to have the car serviced only by mileage, when most manufacturers now insist that the car is serviced annually if the required miles are not being covered. You don't have to use a franchised dealer for servicing – this stipulation was thrown out by

EU legislation in 2002 – but do check for caveats in any case. Be aware also that some marques offer the chance to extend the warranty for a reasonable cost or will 'wind back' the warranty clock to start again if you buy an approved used example from one of their dealers – not a bad option.

UP TO DATE: Make sure you keep the service schedule up to date to maintain the warranty on the family workhorse like this Nissan Qasqai (top) ... and the advice applies equally to commercial vehicles like this Mercedes-Benz Sprinter van
